Anderson Urges B.C. Job Action

'Get Off Butt'

● B.C. Jobless climb to 7.6 per cent. Page 3

Premier Barrett was advised Tuesday to "get up off his butt" and do something about B.C.'s worsening unemployment problem.

The unsolicited advice came from B.C. Liberal leader David Anderson.

Acutally, disclosure that the province's unemployment figure for 1972 had risen to 7.6 per cent from 7.1 per cent for the previous year brought a general shifting of blame.

Barrett said a great deal of the responsibility lay with the ferederal government. Both Anderson and Social Credit house leader Frank Richter put the blame squarely at Barrett's doorstep. Conservative house leader Scott Wallace said the fault lay in a number of areas.

After hearing of Barrett's stand, Anderson said: "He still thinks, now that he's premier, that he can get away with careless and inaccurate statements and buck-passing. It's about time he got up off his butt and did something."

During an interview Barrett said the unemployment figures appeared to reflect a general drift in the Canadian economy. But he was also critical of the federal government's failure to distribute federal money until a late date for winter works programs.

"Had we received those funds earlier, the figure wouldn't have been as bad as it is," he said.

While expressing disappointment over the situation, he said he was hopeful Prime Minister Trudeau would "act quickly" on proposals Barrett said he made during his meeting in Ottawa with Trudeau last month. He did not say what the proposals were.

He said he was certain the unemployment figures would be reduced if Trudeau did take the recommended action.

"We're in need of aggressive leadership from Ottawa and I hope we will get that now that the House is back together."

In a prepared statement Richter said the unemployment picture was "in line with NDP policy which he said had scared business and discouraged investment. He also said that distribution of the money to municipalities to create work had been further delayed by the provincial government's decision to set up a cabinet committee for study.

"Under the previous government, one person in the department of municipal affairs did all the work, and very quickly," Richter said.

Miniplanes Skyjacked

CANNOCK, England (Reuter) — A group of radio control model-aircraft enthusiasts has run up against the crime of the 1970s-hijacking.

Several radio-controlled planes costing up to $320 each have disappeared mysteriously during flights.

The enthusiasts believe that the hijacker has a radio device which can divert the planes.

Early Budget Aims at Jobs

CP, UPI

OTTAWA — Prime Minister Trudeau said Tuesday an early budget would be introduced with measures to alleviate unemployment in Canada which rose to 6.8 per cent in December.

Answering questions in the House of Commons, Trudeau said the government already had taken measures to pump $375 million into winter job creation this year.

He said other aid would come in "the budget speech which we expect will be fairly soon which will announce a whole series of measures in respect of the economy and to reduce unemployment."

Tuesday, the Liberal minority government won its first vote of the 29th parliament, defeating a Conservative motion to postpone the throne speech debate and get on with other business.

The vote was 154 to 104, with only Conservative party members supporting the motion moved by veteran Tory George Hees.

New Democratic and Social Credit party members supported the Liberals to defeat the motion.

Statistics Canada reported Tuesday the seasonally adjusted unemployment rate rose from 6.6 per cent in November to 6.8 per cent in December, leaving 548,000 Canadians unemployed in a labor force of 8.9 million.

Finance Minister John Turner, speaking in debate Tuesday afternoon, gave no new indication of the tax plans or other economic measures which would be contained in his budget.

Turner
. . . 'unexpected reversals'

He said it would contain "new fiscal and other measures to deal with our most pressing economic and social problem, our most pressing human problem — the creation of jobs in Canada."

The minister blamed the high December unemployment on unexpected economic reversals in the October-December quarter. "But the pause was only temporary," he said, noting the large number of strikes during the period.

Turner said he would not make any predictions now for the economic growth in 1973. But, he quoted a forecast by the Organization for Economic Co-operation and Development that Canada would have higher growth than any industrialized country except Japan. He said also the University of Toronto economic forecasting unit had predicted a growth rate of 7½ per cent in the year.

"No doubt there are problems, among which is the fact that the rate of unemployment is higher than it ought to be," Turner conceded. "The pace of growth in Canada for several years has ex-

PARIS — President Georges Pompidou charged Tuesday that the leaders of three governments, including Golda Meir of Israel, will be intruding in French internal politics by attending an international Socialist conference this weekend in Paris. He said French officials will have nothing to do with them.

Others scheduled to attend the congress of the Socialist International include Premier Olof Palme of Sweden and Chancellor Bruno Kreisky of Austria.

The three Socialist leaders were invited by Francois Mittenrand, secretary-general of the French Socialist party.

When asked at his semi-annual news conference what his attitude toward the participants would be, Pompidou tartly replied that this was not the right time for such a meeting, as French National Assembly elections are coming up March 4 and March 11.

Dock Pact Expected By Today

VANCOUVER (CP) — A settlement in the B.C. dock dispute "should be very close," Ed Strang, president of the B.C. Maritime Employers Association, said Tuesday.

Strang said all three outstanding problems had been discussed in a meeting Tuesday between the employers' group and the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union, and added: "I thought we might have had a settlement today."

But he said the union advised him they wanted to meet to discuss the matter and he is to contact union officials today.

The three contentious items which were holding up a settlement are updating the guaranteed job opportunity clause, retroactive pay and amending the wording of the master contract.

The union wants the 1969 guaranteed work clause updated to include members who have joined the union since that date. The dockers also want retroactive pay paid to non-union casual workers.

B.C.'s 3,200 longshoremen went on strike in August, but were ordered back to work by federal legislation which expired Dec. 31.

Blackout Rule May Spur Victoria CBC Station

By BRUCE LOWTHER
Colonist TV Writer

The CBC may set up its own television station in Victoria partly because of a federal rule designed to protect local stations like CHEK, the Colonist learned Tuesday.

There was no official comment from the CBC on strong rumors of a second Victoria TV station but the network did comment on a second set of rumors — about its own AM radio station in Victoria — by saying that won't come at least until 1975 or later.

Sources in the broadcasting industry in several Canadian cities said the CBC has not yet applied to the Canadian Radio-TV Commission in Ottawa for permission to operate a TV channel out of Victoria but the paper work has been started.

The sources said the basic push for a CBC television station in Victoria comes from the fact that this is the only provincial capital in Canada without one — and that goes for radio, too.

But there may have been an extra push due to the CRTC's rule of mid-1972 allowing cable-television systems to black out programs on other channels when the same program is shown on a local channel — provided the local channel asks for the blackout.

B.C. Television, which owns both Victoria's CHEK and Vancouver's CHAN, has frequently asked Victoria Cablevision Ltd. to black out the Seattle ABC station (KMO, Channel 4) when it is showing the episode of Marcus Welby on CHAN (Channel 8) at the same time.

The Victoria cable firm also acceded to a request for a blackout of Channel 4 when both it and CHEK (Channel 6) were showing Love, American Style. This has not been done in recent weeks.

All that is acceptable to the CBC but the rub may have come with something the Colonist reported last fall — B.C. Television wanted the CBC's Vancouver station, CBUT (Channel 2), blacked out on Victoria Cablevision when it and Channel 6 were showing the same program, which often occurs.

Such a blackout never took place but the request may have been the spur that started the CBC to working seriously on a Victoria station of its own.

Judo Falls Land Him In Medical History

By CLAUDE ADAMS
Colonist Reporter

Nanaimo carpenter Tom Ikeda, a one-time green belt in judo, has won a small place in the medical history books, thanks to his stubbornness.

Ikeda, 33, of 181 Nottingham in Nanaimo, might be the only man in North America forced to give up the sport because of an extremely uncommon shoulder injury, called traumatic osteolysis of the clavicle.

And, as reported by Dr. M. J. Smart of Nanaimo Regional General Hospital in a medical journal the case seems to have caught the attention of radiologists all over the continent. It has a prominent place in the New York-based Radiology News Digest.

It all started in October, 1967, when Ikeda had a bad "break fall" while practising at the Nanaimo Judo Club.

"You're not supposed to land on your shoulder, but I did," he said. He went to see his doctor.

X-rays showed nothing unusual and he was given a drug to relieve the pain. But four months later, he hurt his right shoulder again after a fall. Still the x-rays showed nothing wrong, but the young man was warned to give up judo.

He persisted, however, and in April, 1968, he came in complaining of pain in the left shoulder. X-rays were negative again. Determined to continue in the sport, Ikeda went back to the bruising practices and, sure enough, pains started in both shoulders.

"The doctor warned me quite a few times to stop, but I didn't. I just kept going back for more cortisone (an antibiotic) shots," he said.

Ikeda took his last bad fall in February, 1970. The x-rays showed that parts of his collarbone were being destroyed. This time the doctor wouldn't take no for an answer.

"It was by this time apparent," writes Smart, "even to the patient, that the continued falls were producing severe changes in his shoulders and he was finally persuaded to give up judo."

Ikeda, who had been working at the sport since the age of 15, says his trainers and instructors never suspected that he had suffered a bad injury.

"As you're learning, you do suffer quite a bit, but you can't go crying to the instructor every time you get a bruise."

All available data shows that Ikeda's is the first case on record where such an injury was directly attributable to judo.

The collarbone is healing now, and Ikeda jokingly says that he may take up karate.

B.C. Profiling Aimed At Prevention

Help Planned for Child-Beaters

By IAN STREET
Colonist Legislature Reporter

The provincial government is preparing a profile of a typical child-beater in an effort to assist professional groups in early diagnosis.

The move is part of a B.C. program, outlined at a conference Tuesday by Health Minister Dennis Cocke and Rehabilitation Minister Norman Levi, keyed to prevention.

The ministers said there were 180 reported cases of battered children in the province during 1971, the last year for which figures are available. In that period there were 12 deaths.

In 1965 there were 70 cases reported.

Cocke said the government is taking a very serious view of the problem. "There are not that many children being abused," the minister told reporters, "but those who are, must be protected. The parents (of these children) are also in a difficult situation.

"Many of the parents are lonely, isolated, typically the subject of abuse in their own childhood and lacking in self-esteem. But a significant finding of recent studies throughout North America is that 90 per cent can be helped. That's why we feel it is so incumbent on professional groups to come forward so we can help these parents."

The health minister said the four main professional groups to be reached are, doctors, nurses, social workers and ceeded that of other industrialized countries. It is clear that it must increase even faster."

Turner said the new budget would come "very soon" after his meeting with provincial finance ministers Jan. 18-20.

NDP leader David Lewis said the rise in unemployment was "exactly what we expected. I have said many times that the government's financial and economic policies of the last two years would result in disastrous unemployment, and that is what we have got."

Lewis said, however, his party's 31 members would continue to keep the minority Liberal government in office, at least until its policies were known. He said the opposition Conservatives were not "an alternative in which we have confidence."

The NDP leader said the government would have to deliver concrete programs to ease unemployment in its forthcoming budget. He noted that until its loss in the general election Oct. 30 "the government would not even admit there was a problem" and least that much had changed.

The 6.8 per cent rate — seasonally-adjusted to take historical month-to-month fluctuations into account and thus show a trend—was up significantly from 6.3 per cent in December, 1971.

To opposition cries of "fairy tale," Turner said indications are that the economy is recovering — the rate of price increases has slowed, industrial production has "rebounded sharply," labor income and consumer spending are up and the trade picture has improved dramatically.

If that is all the government has to offer, said NDP house leader Stanley Knowles, "the crunch might come sooner than might otherwise have been the case," He was apparently referring to the possibility of an NDP-Conservative vote against the government.

Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield said in his debate-opening speech Monday that debate should be adjourned immediately to allow the government to introduce old age pension legislation.

He said the elderly cannot afford to wait for needed increases in pensions.

The motion was part of a "squeeze" on the NDP which has said that it will not vote want-of-confidence in the government during the throne speech debate at least to allow the Liberals to bring in legislation to cover the pledges made in the speech from the throne.

Barrett Told: Get Off Butt

Anderson said Barrett and his government had done nothing to cope with the unemployment situation in B.C. during the two-week emergency session of the Legislature last fall.

He accused Barrett and some of his ministers of discouraging both business and job creation by making "rash and immature statements." He said he was referring to such matters as talk of taking over the B.C. Tel and comments that have been made concerning government auto insurance.

Anderson said when questioned that he agreed Barrett wasn't totally to blame for the high rate of unemployment — that there were many other factors.

"It certainly is not all his fault. But what I do blame him for is the stupidity of getting up and blaming other people when he should be taking some of the blame himself."

He also said the government has attached far too little importance to the role of trade minister, something that is a second 1972 folio now for Attorney-General Alex Macdonald.

"All they've got is an attorney-general who dabbles with it (trade portfolio) from time to time on a Friday afternoon when somebody forces a bit of paper under his nose," Anderson said.

Said Conservative house leader Wallace, "The reasons for the unemployment figures are many and varied, and the responsibility has to be shared by both the provincial and federal governments."

But the major share of the blame, he said, lay with the federal government for creating a certain amount of unemployment as a means of fighting inflation.

CBC in Victoria

The sources said the CBC probably would establish in Victoria a station rebroadcasting much of what is on Channel 2 with limited programming originating in this city. It would probably be beamed toward Sooke, which has little or no reception of CBC schedules.

There probably would not be large-scale CBC expense on facilities in this area and there definitely would be a problem about a channel.

Most of the sources felt that the CBC might wind up on Channel 10 but that may go instead to Vancouver's proposed third station. The only available channel other than 10 is 3, now used on cable for Bellingham's KVOS (channel 12).

If the CBC in Victoria or a new station in Vancouver was allotted Channel 10, one would have to find another home. That would have to be Channel 3 and Victoria Cablevision then would have to knock a station off the air to show its present community programming in the evening.

A solution might be available by the time the problem arose, since it would take more than a year to get a new station on the air. In Toronto, some cable systems are providing 32-channel service through a converter which adds 20 channels at a cost of $18 plus a small additional monthly fee.

As for a CBC-AM radio station in Victoria, a spokesman in Ottawa said Tuesday the network favors one because of the provincial-capital policy and, more important, because the evening reception in Greater Victoria of Vancouver's CBU is often weak.

However, the CBC has not drawn up detailed plans for such a station or even picked a year when that will be done. Main problems are the lack of satisfactory radio frequencies — there are virtually none — and the possible cost of anywhere from $250,000 to $500,000.

Gorde Hunter

Just Not Hip

HAVING long ago been declared a disaster area by Tailor and Cutter, I usually show restraint when it comes to comment on the clothing fashions of the day.

A Beau Brummel I'm not. Too many years of mixing blues and greens (before such mixings became de rigeur), of insisting stripes were compatible with houndstooth checks, left me with a haberdashery rating in the same general category as Robert Stanfield, Gump Worsley and cousin Clem. I lost all hopes of making the best-dressed list by once wearing black shoes with a natty brown suite.

THIS LACK of sartorial savvy, however, does not prohibit me from recognizing and admiring a well-turned-out man or woman. I have been an unabashed worshipper, for instance, of the impeccable tailoring of such as Cary Grant, George Raft and Leo Durocher for more years than I care to remember.

I bring this up now because the international list of best-dressed men and women was made public the other day and I am astounded at some of the inclusions and at some of the omissions.

For instance, if Mick Jagger is one of the best dressed, there is no hope for men's fashions whatsoever. I've seen cigar store Indians turned out better.

NEW YORK Mayor John Lindsay makes the grade and yet I can never recall seeing a picture of Lindsay in which his collar was not crumpled, his cravat askew.

I go along with actors Harry Belafonte and Sidney Poitier — men who are impeccable in everything from tails to jogging sweats.

But in that whole list, not one athlete, and I'm here to tell you athletes are without doubt some of the best-dressed men you'll ever encounter.

Jean Beliveau and John Ferguson, two former Montreal Canadien stars, not only know what clothes to wear, but have the builds and bearing to carry it off with class.

Dale Tallon of the Vancouver Canucks is fastidious in his clothing selection. Ex-basketball star Bill Russell and ex-jockey Eddie Arcaro. Ex-golfer Gene Sarazen and present hockey player (sometime St. Louis Blues), Gord Kannegiesser. Kannegiesser may well be the best dressed of the whole sporting crowd.

IN THE entertainment field I can't recall two better clothes-horses than comedian Allan King (nobody wears a suit, complete with vest, better than King), and actor Roger Moore of Saint fame. They didn't get a tumble.

I haven't the temerity to tackle the best dressed women's list other than to point out some of the past listings looked as though they got their styles from the Capital Iron catalogue and I guess it won't be much different with some of the "best" this season.

Having successfully made the transition (at least one year late) to double knits, including the flared pants, I now discover double-knits have fallen from fashion favor. The usual life-expectance of my suits, sports jackets, slacks, runs to about 18 months. Therefore, I will be out of style for at least that period of time again.

I MAY NEVER catch up in the shoe styles which is just as well. The many-hued boots, buckles, Cuban heels, buttons and zippers which adorn today's male bootery, are enough to make arches fall out of sheer embarrassment. Foppery is the correct word. An old-fashioned loafer is somewhat passe, but still the most comfortable foot-covering I can think of.

Medium width ties are obviously the only safe bet in a changing style world. You're never "in" but by the same yardstick, never too far out of fashion. Shirts have done everything possible — there are no real surprises left. a faint hope exists that shirt manufacturers will once again get around to manufacturing collars with the two eye-holes for insertion of a collar pin, which still rates the neatest way to keep a tie in place even through the longest cocktail party.

And if the young believe there can be no return to the styles of their dad's youth, they've been watching the wrong fashion-vanes.

THE WIDE lapels of the Forties have already made their comeback. The longer jackets are slowly creeping back. Now all that is left to turn full circle is a switch in strides. There will be no saving on material. Instead of wide bottoms there will be wide knees and narrower bottoms.

Pork pie hats? Quite possibly. Pointed shoes? Hopefully not. Men's purses? You've got to be kidding.

Put's me back to square one.

Child-Beaters

teachers. Preliminary talks have already been held with representatives of the various organizations representing these groups and now the government is attempting to talk directly to those "in the front lines."

Levi said there is a "difficult area of trust and confidentiality involved but added from his many years as a professional social worker this should create no lasting difficulty to seeking out battered children in the early stages.

"There are certain situations in which confidentiality must go by the board and this is particularly true in this matter of child abuse," the rehabilitation minister said. Levi added he hoped individual doctors would enter discussions with the government on this issue.

Meanwhile, the government has appointed Dr. Sid Siegal, professor of pediatrics at the University of British Columbia, as co-educator of a new study of the whole question of child abuse. Cocke said the government was calling on all professional people "to come out of their cocoons to help do the job of ending child abuse."

Levi said previous studies have shown cases of child abuse are invariably repeated and become violent if left unchecked.

Early diagnosis and treatment therefore becomes of great importance, the minister said. He added the government is prepared to provide temporary care for children, if necessary, while parents receive medical and psychiatric help, financial and housing assistance, as well as day care and counselling to assist parents.

"Prevention means breaking of this tragic cycle," Levi said. "And failure to report a possible case of abuse may cost a child's life."

The minister added consideration was being given to a further amendment to the Child Protection act which, if adopted, would make it an offence not to report a suspected case of child beating. In 1967 the act was amended to require any person having information of abandonment, desertion, physical ill treatment or need for protection of a child to report to the authorities.

Another Nutty Diet

YOUR GOOD HEALTH

By DR. G. C. THOSTESON

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I read about a new diet plan where you take one tablet with your breakfast food and then eat fattening foods. It states that the more fattening foods you eat, the faster the weight disappears.

Have you heard of this plan and do you think it would be safe to take? The guarantee states that you must keep the weight you lost off or your money will be refunded. —A. R.

I can't knock down every nutty diet plan that comes down the pike, but I will say about this one that you are never, never going to lose weight by eating "fattening foods" no matter how many pills you take.

The only sensible way to lose weight is through a sensible diet that is well-balanced and where the only guarantee is that you will be able to keep thin and healthy at the same time. The weight loser has to revamp his (or her) concept of food and avoid compulsive eating. A reduction as well as maintenance diet can be balanced yet low in calories. This is what you have to learn.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I've been too embarrassed to write about my problem until now, and too ashamed to go to a foot doctor with my ugly feet. I am near 60 but I remember hiding my feet in bathing shoes as a teen-ager.

I always had bunions but they never hurt until now, and I find the big toe crossing over the one next to it and the toes buckling and the knuckles rise up and hurt.

My job for 30 years is standing almost always in one place. I was always comfortable, but now I just shift from one foot to the other. Am I too old for any help? —M.W.K.

No, you're not too old to be helped, but as you doubtless suspect, correction of your misery may not be as easy or simple as it could have been many years ago.

Some children are born with congenital bunions, and surgical techniques have been worked out to correct this early in life. We didn't have such techniques 60 years ago, however.

I'm sorry as I can be that you've felt embarrassed about your feet all these years. It wasn't your fault, and it's too bad that you let your feelings keep you away from medical care all this time.

But go now. Go to either a podiatrist or an orthopedist, but go find out how much relief is possible for you.

Speed, itself, is not the whole story!
When you read at the national average speed of 300 words per minute, you are reading so slowly that it actually hinders comprehension . . . because ideas crawl in at a rate that discourages easy assimilation.
The fast reader . . . because he's not tied down to word-by-word reading . . . can readily perceive overall themes and ideas and retain the information in a more organized fashion.
See for yourself how this is done!

Here are some of the skills that are taught in the Reading Dynamics Course:
- How to read without hearing and saying all the words.
- How to read more than one word at a time.
- How to see and understand words out of order.
- How to read with purpose.
- How to find the thought in a paragraph.
- How to remember what you read.
- How to read smoothly down the page as well as from left to right.
- How to adjust your speed to different kinds of material, that is, to be a flexible reader.
- How to use your hand to pace your reading.
- How to preview a book.
- How to read newspapers and magazines.
- How to read technical material — journals, texts, reports.
- How to read classics and conceptual material.
- How to make permanent recall records.
- How to take lecture notes.
- How to study for a test.
- How to stabilize your speed and comprehension.
- How to review material.

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Police Supt. Clarence Giarrusso said Tuesday ballistics tests proved a weapon found beside a dead sniper atop a hotel where six persons were killed and 17 wounded was the same .44-calibre magnum used to kill a young police cadet and wound another policeman New Year's Eve.

Giarrusso also identified the sniper, killed by riflemen aboard a helicopter Sunday night, as Mark Essex, 23, of Emporia, Kan. Essex was believed to have been in the New Orleans area about six months, employed in a federal project which Giarrusso declined to identify.

In Emporia the Essex family's minister said the young black man had developed a militant dislike of white persons while serving in the U.S. Navy.

Nude Adam and Eve Shock Churchgoers

RIO DE JANEIRO (UPI) — A church mural showing Adam and Eve nude during their expulsion from the Garden of Eden has stirred a huge controversy in the town of Ferro.

Rev. Jose Cassimiro, the pastor, said he would not take the painting down except by order from the bishop or the Pope himself.

Many church-goers sit with their eyes closed, or walk into the church backwards.

B.C. Percentage Surges

Jobless Up to 7.6

OTTAWA (CP) — Another unseasonal jump in the labor force helped push unemployment to an estimated 584,000 in December, Statistics Canada reported Tuesday.

British Columbia's rate was 7.6 per cent, up from 7 per cent in 1971. The rate hit 7.6 in 1970 but was less in every year since 1961, when it was 8.5 per cent.

With figures in for all of 1972, the national unemployment rate was slightly more than 6.3 per cent for the year, a little better than the 6.4 per cent for 1971 but the highest from that year back to 1961, when the annual rate was 7.1 per cent.

Growth in the number of people seeking work in December overshadowed a less-than-usual decrease in employment and set the monthly rate of unemployment at 6.5 per cent of the labor force, up from 5.9 per cent in November and 6.1 per cent in December, 1971.

There were 524,000 unemployed in November and 530,000 in the last month of 1971.

Adjusted to take account of seasonal factors and depict the underlying trend, the unemployment rate was 6.8 per cent in December compared with 6.6 per cent in November and 6.3 per cent in December a year ago, the statistics bureau said.

The labor force, which usually decreases at the tail end of the year, grew to 8,929,000 in December from 8,887,000 the previous month and 8,655,000 in December, 1971.

It was the biggest labor force figure for the year with the exception of June, July and August, when vacationing students annually swell the total. The force topped 9 million in each of those months.

Also reflecting the growth in the labor force was the participation rate — the percentage of the civilian population age 14 and over which is working or looking for work.

The rate was 59.1 per cent of that population in December, up from 56 per cent in November. For all of 1972 it was 56.5 per cent, highest since the bureau started computing the figures in 1961. The rate was 56.1 per cent for all of 1971.

Participation rates and labor force growth have been cited as major factors in 1972s relatively high unemployment insurance benefits plus a shorter qualifying time also have been cited as one factor.

As far as Michael Hampson of Edmonton is concerned, modern snowmobile is no match in reliability for traditional dog sled. Hampson has been training 14 dogs for four years in rescue techniques. Last winter, his team pulled one snowmobile from broken ice and retrieved another that ran out of gas.

Mackasey Defends Insurance Theory

OTTAWA (UPI) — Bryce Mackasey, a Liberal backbencher since he resigned as minister of manpower and immigration, said Tuesday his much-criticized unemployment insurance scheme was one of the most progressive in the western world.

Mackasey said the recent emphasis on abuses of the system was placing a tragic stigma on a scheme which was genuinely needed by thousands of jobless Canadians. He said the real villain was unemployment itself, not insurance against it.

The veteran Quebec Liberal resigned from Prime Minister Trudeau's cabinet in November on the grounds he was being made a scapegoat for right-wing criticisms of government policy.

Citing private polls, Mackasey said he believed 51 per cent of the people who voted against the Trudeau government in the federal election Oct. 30 did so because of the rate of unemployment, 13 per cent because of inflation and 6 per cent because they believed old age pensions needed improving.

Only 5 per cent voted against the government because of welfare, baby bonuses, assistance to poor families, poor administration and abuses of the unemployment insurance program and other related issues, he said.

"That did not prevent people from jumping off the bandwagon or moving from the traditional humanitarian approach to one of extreme reaction," he said.

"The tragedy is not that it affected me. The tragedy is we have temporarily placed a stigma on one of the most progressive pieces of legislation in any country in the western world."

In response to opposition demands that the government place the emphasis on tax cuts to improve economic conditions in Canada, Mackasey said he could see little difference in terms of the economy between tax cuts and paying out $2 billion in unemployment insurance benefits as Canada did last year.

Moreover, he said, he was not about to apologize for the generosity of average weekly unemployment insurance benefits of $66 as opposed to an average $35 three years ago.

Rooftop Sniper Was Ex-Marine

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Police Supt. Clarence Giarrusso said Tuesday ballistics tests proved a weapon found beside a dead sniper atop a hotel where six persons were killed and 17 wounded was the same .44-calibre magnum used to kill a young police cadet and wound another policeman New Year's Eve.

Giarrusso also identified the sniper, killed by riflemen aboard a helicopter Sunday night, as Mark Essex, 23, of Emporia, Kan. Essex was believed to have been in the New Orleans area about six months, employed in a federal project which Giarrusso declined to identify.

In Emporia the Essex family's minister said the young black man had developed a militant dislike of white persons while serving in the U.S. Navy.

Giarrusso said there was evidence Essex might have been acting alone. But he said evidence just as strong indicated that he might have been one of a group.

"I'm not satisfied either way," Giarrusso said.

Any surviving snipers could have walked out of the battle-scarred Howard Johnson's hotel wearing police uniforms, a Seattle Marine who photographed the scene said Tuesday.

John Majors, 25, a photo-journalist with the Marine Corps in New Orleans, was in an armored Marine helicopter that flew within 40 feet of the hotel roof.

"It was well-enough planned that they may have had police uniforms," Majors said. "There were literally hundreds of police all around the place. Those guys could have just walked out unnoticed."

Majors said he was convinced more than one sniper was on the roof — based on the fact that his helicopter drew gunfire after the first sniper was shot.

Socialists

His implication was that the Socialist leaders would be giving aid to the leftist alliance of Socialists and Communists, who have been getting about 43 to 45 per cent of the popular support in pre-election polls.

"I naively believed that when a chief of government went to a foreign country, in view of his responsibilities, he spoke for his country," Pompidou said. "It seems that this is not so, and that they are coming as party militants. Since these ladies and gentlemen are coming as militants, well, it is normal that we consider them as militants and that they have no official contact with French authorities."

Much of the furor about the meeting has centred on Mrs. Meir. This will be her first visit to Paris as prime minister, and it seemed certain that the trip would do nothing to warm the icy French-Israel relations.

Street demonstrations both in favor and against Israel have been called and heavy security forces are expected to be called out.

Report Bombshell

Japan, France Rising Fastest

By ALINE MOSBY

PARIS (UPI) — By 1985, France and Japan will have left Britain and Germany in the dust to boast the highest living standards in the world after the United States, an American research institute said Wednesday.

The Paris branch of the Hudson Institute of Croton, N.Y., has dropped an economic bombshell in a report ordered by the French government and delivered last week. The gist of the report has leaked out, bringing the report's principal author, political scientist Edmund Stillman, sharp reactions.

"It's amazing — the Germans are morose, the Italians are annoyed, the British are scornful and the French are incredulous," said soft-spoken, scholarly Stillman.

Stillman said his figures, corrected for inflation, are based on gross national product, labor productivity growth, investment efficiency and technological performance. His prediction for 1985 per capita gross national product ranking:

United States, Japan, France, Sweden, Denmark, Canada, Switzerland, Norway, West Germany, Finland, Belgium, Italy, the Netherlands, Austria, Britain and Spain.

"The most cursory look at the figures showed that the German economy was not the most dynamic economy in Europe," he said. "The French economy in the last 13 years has grown more than 20 per cent faster than the German economy, in the last seven years more than a third faster and in the last four years more than twice as fast."

"Britain's economy 'took off' in the 18th century, Germany in the 1870s, but France was stagnant until after 1945, when it divested itself of colonial wars and began rapid expansion in the 60s."

"Our projections show France by 1980 should have the current American standard of living. Germany will not have it until 1990 and Britain will not have it even in the year 2000, the way things are going."

Stillman said Britain is "waiting for something magic to happen" by joining the common market, because it thinks the market will teach the British some economic dynamism. But that is like the Italians saying Britain in the market can teach Italy political stability, he said.

"It's not that Britain has done so badly, but that other countries are learning the tricks and are doing much better. By 1980, Italy should be richer than Britain," he said.

Mr. Stanfield's Strategy

"SEASONALLY ADJUSTED," the national unemployment rate is grimmer than ever. December statistics released Tuesday show it to be up from 6.6 per cent in November to 6.8 per cent. It is an unseasonal increase. The labor force usually decreases at this time of the year, but it was up 42,000 over November, and 274,000 over December of 1971. The actual number of jobless on the records is 584,000. In November it was 524,000 and in the previous December it was 530,000.

But, despite this deterioration, things aren't any grimmer for the national Liberal government responsible for the growing gloom. Prime Minister Trudeau is going to be allowed to carry on, for the time being anyway, in his minority position.

"Seasonally adjusted" as Opposition Leader Stanfield called him, the prime minister can feel confident that the NDP, which is the least ready of any party for another election, will support him for a little longer.

Mr. Stanfield chose not to go into specifics in his non-confidence motion in Throne Speech reply. He roasted the NDP as well as the Liberals, but, just as the government's promises to right the wrongs of the country were given in generalities, so was the Conservative leader's criticism of the administration's performance.

It was a simple motion of no confidence which doesn't strain the New Democrats in their whip-hand position. Mr. Stanfield could have made them lash out at the government now? But as things stand, their pledge of support at least until the Throne Speech package is opened, can be maintained.

It would have been no problem for Mr. Stanfield to have demanded certain immediate action, a corporation tax increase for instance, which the NDP would have to back, and together they would run the government out of office.

Perhaps Mr. Stanfield is having second thoughts on forming a government with his two-less elected members than the Liberals. But more than likely he feels that the government's string of Throne Speech proposals, when finally unravelled, will tie the Trudeaucrats in a tighter knot than ever, and improve his position.

It could well be that when the new budget is presented, in about a month's time, the NDP will not be able to continue going along with the Liberals, and Mr. Stanfield then will have his chance. If allowed to take over, he could introduce some solid legislation on unemployment and other vital matters, said to have been prepared already, and then go to the people. There is little doubt, if this should take place, that the Conservatives would be given a working majority.

This is something the country needs if it is to get "adjusted" in the right direction.

Priority: Good Service

CANADA'S POST OFFICE is not the only one having difficulty in trying to operate both efficiently and economically. Britain's post office, among others, has its woes too. But there seems to be a remarkable difference: the British post office admits its mistakes.

According to a report in The Times, Sir William Ryland, chairman of the post office, has acknowledged that the many complaints of late delivery at Christmas were justified — and has taken this failure so seriously as to say, "I do not think there is any need for me to give a gesture about resigning. My future is on the minister's mind and he will take the decision."

What had happened, the London newspaper reported, "had hit the post office hard because it was trying to carry Christmas mail more economically. The postal service was losing money, and it was right to try to save every penny it could, but not to the extent of giving bad service, Sir William said. 'At no time was it ever in our minds to carry economy to the stage at which we put at risk the delivery by Christmas of first and second-class mail posted by the recommended dates'."

Sir William was further quoted as saying that in the finely balanced relation of staff to work to be done efficiently, there were "misjudgments and genuine mistakes in the very difficult task of giving and maintaining a good service in a business that is losing money heavily . . . There must be no repetition and we are working hard to see that the weaknesses that have been revealed are rooted out. I promise that the probing will be deep and the action swift."

Canadians, who have become unhappily accustomed to poorer postal service at higher cost, might feel some hope if they could hear such words as these from their own post office. Perhaps, with the Trudeau government carrying on in trepidation and anxious for the public's favor, they may.

Hazard

THE NEW DEMOCRATS, when the Social Credit government was in power, were scornful of W. A. C. Bennett's claims to have created many thousands of new jobs in British Columbia. Perhaps they now are skeptical about their own ability as a government to create employment. But it's odd to see this idealistic regime holding back on work that needs to be done at a time of high joblessness.

For instance, the snow that fell in the legislative buildings driveway last Thursday was allowed to lie there, a hazard to civil servants and visitors alike. Its removal would have been a petty expense to the province, but could have been work for casual labor.

Canadian Viewpoint

Year of Detente Illusion

By LUBOR J. ZINK from Ottawa

A few months ago, some analysts of east-west relations started referring to 1973 as "the European Year."

The term was coined as a descriptive label of an anticipated major shift of political focus and diplomatic activity from Asia to Europe. That such a shift was in the making became evident from the emerging convergence of its manifold preparations.

Some of these preparations—such as West Germany Chancellor Willy Brandt's "Ostpolitik," and the U.S.-Soviet Strategic Arms Limitation Talks (SALT) — have been under way for several years. Others —notably President Nixon's trip to Peking — cropped up unexpectedly.

The impetus for these and many subsidiary steps in the same direction came from Nixon's 1969 vision of a broad movement in East-West relations from the postwar era of confrontation into an era of negotiations.

In other words, a progression from the nuclear age's barest necessity of conflict management, through mutually beneficial detente, to a partnership of the superpowers in securing "a full generation of peace."

Since the global cold war confrontation started and remained centred in Europe, the ultimate objective of all detente efforts had to be a European settlement.

For two decades, the western concept of a European settlement rested on the Yalta and Potsdam agreements in which the victors over Nazi Germany pledged restoration of national sovereignty and free political choice to the liberated countries. This was unacceptable to the Soviet Union which violated the wartime accords by forcing its totalitarian system on the nations of Eastern and Central Europe which had the misfortune of being "liberated" by the Russians.

For the Kremlin, a European settlement means western acceptance and international "legalization" of the Russian colonial empire Stalin had created by deceit and brutal force as a base for further expansion.

Confident that the West would not go to war to free the victims of Soviet imperialism, Moscow refused to consider any real change in "the new reality" of postwar Europe. It was equally confident that the democracies will tire of the tensions and risks of a seemingly futile confrontation and accept a "realistic" settlement on Soviet terms once the awareness of the origin and nature of the East-West conflict dies with the Trumans, Eisenhowers, Churchills and Adenauers.

The expectation of a Western cave-in to persistent combinations of war threats and "peace" offensives proved correct, despite the clear demonstrations of Communist perfidy and brutality in Hungary, Czechoslovakia and other parts of the world.

By the end of the 1960s, the old appeasement folly, draped in fashionable detente banners, danced onto the political stage with Brandt, knowing that Moscow would listen only to proposals fitting its own detente concept of legalization of Soviet expansion and withdrawal of American troops from Western Europe, offering a unilateral deal that would meet the Kremlin's first requirement and facilitate the attainment of the second. In return for writing off the Soviet satellites, Brandt was hoping to get special Russian treatment of what he always endeavored to present as the special case of divided Berlin and divided Germany.

Moscow, certain of easy control of the minor concessions Brandt required for selling his "normalization of relations" scheme to his electorate and the NATO, accepted the package with alacrity.

While negotiations of the details of Brant's "Ostpolitik" got under way, President Nixon found Moscow equally willing to make a similarly one-sided deal on strategic arsenals.

★ ★ ★

In both instances, the Kremlin was getting what it was after for negligible concessions, but both deals were hailed as major breakthroughs in detente diplomacy.

Presented as tremendous gains, these two Western cave-ins (the unfinished SALT exercise has already given Russia strategic superiority) set in motion an avalanche of wishful thinking which has the capacity of sweeping Western Europe into the Soviet orbit.

The shape of preparations for the Moscow-pushed "conference of European security and co-operation" leaves little doubt that 1973 is destined to be the "European Year" of the detente illusion.

West Bank and Gaza Strip

Living With the Conquerors

By JOHN DE ST. JORRE from Jerusalem

The philosophic acceptance implicit in the old Arab saw "whoever married my mother is my father" today sums up the majority view of five and a half years of Israeli occupation among the Palestinian Arabs of the West Bank in the Gaza Strip.

These are the most important—and controversial — territories occupied by Israel in the 1967 war because they contain the most people. Just over 600,000 Arabs live on the West Bank and a little under 400,000 are in the Gaza Strip. Other areas overrun by the Israelis are less problematical. The Golan Heights, taken from Syria, were virtually deserted at the time of occupation and are now being settled by the Israelis.

East Jerusalem, with a population of 70,000 Arabs, has been annexed to Israel. Sinai, Egyptian territory, is largely desert inhabited by nomadic Bedouins. The northern coastal area and the southern tip at Sharm esh-Sheikh, which commands the strategic Tiran Straits, are being settled, but the rest remains empty and untouched apart from military installations and the development of Sinai's oil and mineral resources.

The feeling of the people on the West Bank and Gaza, and the Israeli government's future plans for the two territories are, therefore, of crucial importance. But neither are writ large and both tend to cast off more heat than light.

In Jerusalem, the lot of the occupied Palestinians tends to be over-simplified. Pacified and passive, one is told; class-ridden and divided, they warn you; "never had it so good," people enthuse. Yet, travelling in the territories, it becomes clear that the effects of the occupation are far more complex, subtle and interesting than these generalizations — with their hard-core of truth — suggest.

There is, first of all, the phenomenon of the vacuum of peace, the vacuum of Israeli policy and of Arab states' intentions and, above all, the airless psychological and emotional void between the conquerors and the conquered.

The story always looks different depending on which side you are standing. Statistics conflict, versions collide, emphases shift, both sides lying shamelessly when pressed. Arab and Jew, you realize, share a Byzantine past.

The Palestinians continue to hate the occupation even though large numbers of them, especially the unskilled workers, are doing well out of it. Most of them see no inconsistency in profiting out of Israel's economic boom — the need is mutual, anyway — and simultaneously resisting the military government's attempts to break up the refugee camps — notably in Gaza — establish new Israeli settlements and generally extend the machinery of their government in the territories.

Violent resistance by the Palestinian guerrilla organization is not dead but it is reduced to a flicker on the West Bank and a smouldering fire in Gaza. Opposition to the government takes milder but still significant forms. There is a widespread determination to stay in spite of the now easy way out across the Jordan bridges. Nationalism is expressed by holding on to houses, lands, a way of life and by having babies.

Politics, in this muted sense, are far from dead though no political activity is allowed by the occupying power. The Israelis tend to see things in terms of good and efficient government. The Arabs discern a political motive behind every move. While recognizing that the Israelis are relatively benevolent conquerors—"they have learned all the skills of the imperialists," a man in Naples told me with a hint of admiration in his voice — there is a deep apprehension about the future.

Their fears are fed by the growing knowledge that the occupation is going to last a long time, by the eclipse of the guerrillas and by the continued divisions and military incapacity of the Arab states. Leading people in both areas still talk convincingly of what they would like to see happen "after the occupation." Some sort of link-up with Jordan, though not on a master-servant basis, is generally accepted, although a small minority — mainly old political opponents of King Hussein — opt for a separate Palestinian state. But the realists that is, the majority — know that the liberating divorce from Zion is not going to be a speedy one.

Another major source of concern is the current debate going on in Israel about the future of the West Bank and Gaza. If the two areas were uninhabited, there is little doubt that Israel would have applied a more positive policy of Jewish settlement or annexation — or both — by now. However, the prospect of a future million Arabs—to add to the 400,000 already living within the borders of Israel itself — act as a deterrent to all but the most extreme expansionists.

The argument, with Moshe Dayan on one side and Pinhas Sapir on the other, is far from academic. Next year the Israeli voters will go to the polls and a new government and — almost certainly — a new prime minister, in succession to Mrs. Golda Meir, will be chosen.

The Dayan camp favors greater economic and administrative penetration, "annexation without formal annexation," as one Israeli commentator has called it. Sapir and his followers oppose this on the grounds that assimilation, even economic assimilation, of a million Arabs will irrevocably ruin the special nature of the Jewish state. The fact that Dayan and Sapir are the leading contenders in the succession struggle further complicates the issue.

Meanwhile, Golda Meir sits somewhere in the middle of the debate, rejecting the concept of absorbing the territories with their Arab populations but doing little to stop the daily progress of "creeping intergration" that is undoubtedly taking place. Like unions, this Israeli-Arab marriage, shotgun though it was, has a dynamic of its own.

★ ★ ★

Short of a real peace, the present situation is ideal for Israel. When I asked one Palestinian how long he thought the Israelis would like it to continue, he looked at me levelly and replied: "At least to the time when your son can ask my son the same question."

Amnesty International Claims

Torture in Turkish Jails

By LAURENCE MARKS from London

Amnesty International is satisfied that political prisoners have been tortured in Turkey and that there is no evidence that torture has ceased.

This announcement by the international organization which campaigns for "prisoners of conscience" contradicts the statement made by the Turkish foreign minister, Haluk Bayulken, to the Council of Europe in Paris that prisoners had not been tortured.

A mission from the British section of Amnesty International visited Turkey to investigate allegations of torture. It was composed of Muir Hunter, QC, a prominent barrister, and two magistrates, Mrs. Muir Hunter (his wife) and Sir Osmond Williams.

Mr. Hunter said that they decided to make the visit after receiving a written assurance from the Turkish Embassy in London that they would be permitted to visit prisons and talk to prisoners.

On the day after they arrived in Ankara, they had a friendly meeting with the minister of justice, Fehmi Alpaslan, and officials. The mission handed over a list of prisoners whom it wished to interview. Mr. Alpaslan said that they could do so. He also appeared to agree that they should receive a copy of the Turkish government's own report of its inquiry into torture allegations.

Two days later, they were told by the Turkish foreign ministry that all but one of the prisoners on their list were under the control of the Turkish General Staff and that the Ministry of Justice had no jurisdiction over them. (Eleven provinces of Turkey have been under martial law since the middle of 1971.) The mission was refused access to these prisoners.

Later, at Sagmalcilar Women's Prison, the mission had a two-hour interview with Mrs. Ilkay Demir, a 26-year-old medical student at Istanbul University, the only prisoner on the list now said to be under the ministry's jurisdiction.

She corroborated a statement made by her husband, Necmi Demir, a 28-year-old economics student at the university accused in May 1971 of "trying to change the Turkish constitution by force." The statement had been taken from the files of the Third Extraordinary Military Court. It alleges that he was tortured by being beaten on the soles of his feet for six hours in a cell in the Istanbul police headquarters on May 28, 1971.

Mrs. Demir also signed a copy of her own statement, taken from the same court files, that she had been forced under threat of torture to accuse her husband falsely of having taken part in the kidnapping and murder of the Israeli consul-general, Ephraim Elrom; and that she had seen her husband in police headquarters on May 28, 1971, when he was carried out of the cell in which he had been tortured and laid on a desk.

She confirmed that on this occasion she had tended her husband's wounded feet and those of another prisoner, Irfan Ucar, a 25-year-old engineering student at the Technical University of Ankara, accused of refusing to give information about a resistance organization; and that the floor of the cell in which they had been tortured was covered with blood.

She also told the mission about tortures of other political prisoners by applying electrodes to the head and body, including the genital organs, and by thrusting a police truncheon into the vagina or anus. She believed that it was because she alone had not been tortured that the mission had been allowed to interview her.

The mission took the view that she was telling the truth. Throughout the interview she was quite composed, and had answered questions only after consideration. If she had any doubt in her mind, or if her knowledge was from hear-say, she had said so.

The mission later tried to obtain permission to interview the prisoners said to be under military control, but was refused. It was told that, under Law No. 353 of 1972, passed about six months ago, all these prisoners (although mostly civilians before their arrest) were now deemed to be soldiers. The mission was also unable to obtain a copy of the Turkish government's own inquiry report.

Carlson had refused until the last to abandon the ship, remaining aboard for 16 days after it was first battered by a hurricane.

Never Before Has Leading Western Nation Been So Criticized by Staunch Friends

Bombing of Hanoi Still Producing Shock Waves of Anger

By JOSEPH C. HARSCH, from Washington

The bombing of Hanoi and Haiphong has been stopped, but the extraordinary shock waves of reaction which it set off continue to reverberate throughout the world.

Among the communist countries and parties the usual and expectable protests seemed mild by contrast with the stronger expressions of outrage among countries which for years have been America's closest friends, supporters, and clients. The more dramatic reactions include the following:

● Britain's former prime minister, Harold Wilson, who consistently supported the American war effort in Vietnam when he was in office, cancelled an American lecture tour in protest. A delegation from Wilson's Labor party delivered a forceful protest to the U.S. embassy.

● In Australia, which has moved so close to the U.S. in recent years that even its mother country, Britain, has been pushed aside, dock workers have boycotted American ships and the Australian government has ended all involvement in the Vietnam war.

● In Denmark, such a staunch supporter of the United States that a body of its citizens celebrates America's July 4 Independence Day, the prime minister asked his parliament for a grant of $700,000 for "humanitarian relief" to North Vietnam.

Heretofore, Denmark has divided its relief funds equally between North and South-Vietnam.

Prime Minister Anker Joergensen said he was breaking from the principle of even distribution because the American bombing had created "an extraordinary and acute" need for aid in the Hanoi and Haiphong area.

★ ★ ★

● Sweden's prime minister criticized the bombing so strongly that Washington submitted a diplomatic protest and told the Swedes to delay the departure of their new ambassador to Washinton. The Swedes will contribute to rebuilding the heavily damaged Bach Mai hospital in Hanoi.

● Norway's eight political parties joined in a statement calling for a final end to all bombings in Vietnam.

● Canada's Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau sent "several messages" to Washington during the bombing in which he "deplored" it.

● In Bonn "government sources" are quoted as saying that Chancellor Willy Brandt's "displeasure" over the bombing will be expressed in Washington by his close personal friend and cabinet colleague, Egon Bahr.

Never before has a leading western country been so publicly criticized as in this case. And never before has there been such clear disassociation from the policy at issue.

Perhaps partly the wave of revulsion was the result of the fact that hopes for an end to the war had been raised so high just before Christmas, only to be smashed in the rain of bombs on Hanoi. But the wave of revulsion was unique in its scope and intensity.

Anxious teenage girl and frightened little boy reflect bewilderment of Vietnamese.

The fact of the destruction of the Bach Mai hospital, coupled with reports of "pattern bombing" of targets within residential sections of Hanoi, seemed to strike people and governments as peculiarly out of date and phase with these times.

★ ★ ★

There could be no doubt that American repute as a moral and high-minded country was severely damaged. Fairly or unfairly, even America's best friends overseas began comparing the bombing of Hanoi to Germany's bombings of Guernica, Warsaw, Rotterdam, and Coventry.

★ ★ ★

The damage to America's good name may prove as severe as the damage Russia suffered from its suppression of the Hungarian rebellion in 1965 or of Czechoslovakia's reach for freedom in 1968. The Russians had been expected to behave ruthlessly. The Americans are supposed to behave in a more principled way.

British Idealists Clash With Economic Reality

By JOHN ALLAN MAY, from London

Great Britain's situation today presents a classic example of an advanced economy in need of greater growth. Now many among the young and some academics challenge this whole concept of the need for growth.

They are thinking in terms of more cars, more noise, more coal, more oil, more money, more things, more greed, and more pollution. They ask, simply: Who needs it? The answer given here is Britain, certainly, for one.

But at least there is a silver lining to the cloud that growth produces.

For more and more what buoys Britain up is not so much its great outpouring of consumer goods, but its service industries, its banking business, its insurance know-how, its hotels and history, its ships and planes, its natural science, its professions, and its art, music, and literature.

Great Britain had a balance of payments surplus in 1971 of as much as $2.5 billion. Three quarters of this surplus was produced not by goods but by services. In 1973, according to the pundits of the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development (OECD) in Paris, the surplus may entirely disappear. There is likely to be a small deficit.

But, again, were it not for the continuing growth of trade in "invisibles" this deficit would be enormous. It might reach $3 billion. It would overwhelm the British people. Instead, there is a near-certainty that this country will be able to take all the shocks the economic situation can produce, maintain its balance, and improve its society.

This is what the switch away from things and toward ideas now means to the country that began the very industrial revolution that today challenges the whole concept of the "advanced civilization." Yet the fact is, it remains true that Great Britain needs economic growth in the classic sense.

It does not need more noise, more greed, more money, more pollution. But it does need more cars, more roads, more houses, more oil, more goods, and, in general, more material wealth. Failure to grow in these areas would result, considering Britain's present circumstances, in very great hardship.

Maybe it is this that many of the young, and also academic opponents of growth, do not quite understand, business economists here declare. The present circumstances are these:

● The number of wholly unemployed officially is set at around 700,000. This is twice as high as the acceptable norm set by Lord Beveridge, founder of Britain's welfare state, and almost three times as high as that experienced in the years of growth immediately after The Second World War.

● Some regions of Britain are underprivileged. Indeed the further one goes from London the higher the incidence both of unemployment and bad housing.

● About the only way known at present of restoring even a rough kind of equality is through economic growth. Scotland's hopes now, for instance, are high. But they are heavily dependent on development of the great new oil fields discovered in the North Sea.

● There also is the question of inflation. Britain's has been very fast and dangerous. OECD sets Britain's annual rate at the start of this winter at an alarming 11.8 per cent.

★ ★ ★

Inflation cannot be overcome by selling more services alone. It needs greater productivity in Britain's factories. And if unemployment is not to grow still further that means much higher production, which, in turn, requires a much greater volume of sales.

Finally, Britain needs growth on entry into the European Economic Community for one very good, and strikingly new, reason: without it an exceedingly uncomfortable imbalance could result in the new Europe.

As it is, a slowdown in West Germany together with a very rapid advance in France is already threatening the balance of Europe to some extent. Without rapid economic growth in Britain, the French standard of living, for instance, could be twice as high as the British in only 12 years.

★ ★ ★

Happily, growth is present for Britain. The current rate is about 5 per cent per year This is twice the usual rate of growth of the British economy over the past 30 years. It is about right for the job in hand.

But OECD is anxious lest this rate drop away this year to 4 per cent. And Britain's National Institute for Economic and Social Research puts the likely figure in 1974 at 3.4 per cent, unless policies are changed, or attitudes are.

Issue 'Matter of Urgency' for MPs

Death Penalty Free Vote Set

By FRED J. PATTEMORE
From Ottawa

The federal government has promised new legislation early in the new session of parliament to determine the fate of capital punishment in Canada.

The five-year experimental abolition of the death penalty, other than for the murders of on-duty policemen and prison officers, expired last month.

In the throne speech, the government promised new legislation and, perhaps significantly, called for a free vote on the issue.

★ ★ ★

Government spokesmen indicated the legislation was regarded as a priority item. The throne speech termed it a "matter of urgency."

Abolition in 1967 was by way of a government bill, but voting at that time was along the usual party lines.

Even before the experiment began there had been no executions in Canada since December, 1962, when the federal cabinet began commuting death sentences to life imprisonment.

What the new legislation will be is still unclear, according to the newly-appointed solicitor-general, Warren Allmand.

"What we are considering is some sort of extension," he said. He added members of the cabinet were still involved in discussion.

In November, the Canadian Criminology and Corrections Association urged the government to extend the abolition for a further two years and, at the same time, appoint a royal commission on the subject.

The association argued that knowledge of murder in Canada was in an "uncertain state" and that a great many reported murders, on the basis of the manner in which they were handled by the courts, were not murders at all.

To support its view, the association cited statistics showing that of the 1,157 murders reported by police from 1966 to 1969, only 565 involved convictions and of these only nine were for capital murder, 167 on non-capital murder, 365 on manslaughter and 24 on lesser offences.

★ ★ ★

In December, the government itself issued a report prepared by Montreal criminologist Abdel Fattah which showed that of all violent crimes, criminal homicide showed the smallest increase.

Fattah noted also an absence of any statistical trend as such in criminal homicide and he likened its growth with the overall increase in violent crime generally.

He argued against capital punishment as a deterrent to murder on the grounds murder was a passionate rather than a violent crime.

He said murderers were impulsive people, that people generally were unable to conceive of their own death and that many murderers are indifferent to death, often committing suicide after the murder.

Lynch Attacks IRA on U.S. Trip

By ROD CURRIE, from London

The folks back home are watching with keen interest the progress of Irish Prime Minister Jack Lynch on his sensitive week-long mission to the United States.

His self-proclaimed goal is to encourage greater U.S. investment in Ireland, but an equally important reason for the trip is to try to revise somewhat the thinking of the influential Irish-American community there with regard to the tragedy of Ireland.

It is a delicate task: To strip away some of the traditional theories long-held by Irish-Americans without giving offence to a group that has been generous and sympathetic to the land of their forefathers throughout the current turmoil.

In the republic, many feel that their Irish-American cousins have a greatly over-simplified view of the Northern Ireland situation. No doubt many Americans were disturbed when Lynch said that much of the money raised for relief in the U.S. actually was funnelled through illegal channels to arm terrorist operations in Northern Ireland. The reference was to the illegal Irish Republican Army whom Lynch termed "the enemies of Ireland."

As indicated by an egg-throwing attack as the prime minister left a TV studio, his views run counter to some hard Irish-American convictions that the island should be free of Britain at almost any cost.

In Ireland, many who sincerely want to see a united Ireland but reject IRA methods have long complained that they have difficulty communicating their views to Irish-Americans, even the moderates. Many Irish also agree, that withdrawal of British troops might prove disastrous in the current situation.

Nevertheless, the thrust of Lynch's appeal that Americans send aid only through the Irish Red Cross or the various churches seems to defy an Irish-American tradition dating back to the founding of the Irish Republican Brotherhood in New York in 1858. Many believe, indeed, that descendants of families who fled to the U.S. in the famine of the 1840s held to the IRA creed more strongly than the Irish who stayed behind.

Vancouver's West End Joy to Criminals

Highrises Plague Police

Canadian Press
From Vancouver

A veteran city policeman says the concrete canyons of Vancouver's high-level apartment area, the west end, will be a breeding ground for crime until police learn some new crime-prevention methods.

Sgt. Tom Findlay, whose beat is the west end, said the unique character of the district, with its block upon block of 20 and 30-storey apartment buildings, presents a unique challenge to policemen.

"The high-density residential area has created unusual, almost impossible problems for the policeman," he said.

"There is no other area in North America to compare with it; not even Manhattan.

★ ★ ★

"The main problem is that there is just no way we can patrol all of the high-rises."

Sgt. Findlay says most crime in the area might be easily prevented — break-ins and thefts of jewelry, television sets and other valuables.

"Doors and windows to suites are often left unlocked," he said.

"A lot of buildings have doors that are poorly constructed and are fitted with inadequate locks. An amateur thief with a piece of celluloid or a credit card can be inside in a split-second.

"Some of these places are really cleaned out."

★ ★ ★

Thieves have several ways of entering buildings, even those with locked front doors and intercom systems, Sgt. Findlay said.

"He might have a girlfriend inside who can give him a key. The only thing those doors do is make it harder for the police to get inside."

The alienation of modern apartment dwellers, with few people even knowing their neighbors, makes it easy for a thief to wander passageways to look for an unlocked door, he said.

★ ★ ★

It's highly unlikely anyone will question what he is doing, Sgt. Findlay said.

The practice of leaving valuable articles in parked cars also makes a thief's job an easy one, the police sergeant said, and underground parking lots attached to many apartment buildings makes it even esier.

ARGYLE MACHINE WORKS (1962) LTD.

From Port Alberni are pleased to announce their latest expansion into the Duncan area. As of January 2nd., 1973, they will be operating E & M MACHINE WORKS, Box 566, Jacob Road, Duncan, B.C., as a division of Argyle Machine.

Mr. Ken Sexton

Mr. Bill Pridie

Mr. Phil Humber

Mr. Ken Sexton has left Argyle to manage the Duncan Branch and he is joined by Mr. Bill Pridie who will be in the position of Sales Manager over both Divisions.

Mr. Pridie, formerly of Mainland Foundry & Engineering Ltd., wishes to thank all the people with whom he has done business in the past few years and hopes he can still be of service to them in his new capacity.

Mr. Phil Humber has also joined E & M Machine Works as plant superintendent in charge of machine and welding shops.

The management of Argyle Machine Works thanks all their customers on the East Coast of the Island for their past business and now, with their latest expansion into Duncan, they feel they can give a faster and more complete service to everyone.

Fuels Pace Record Year for Minerals

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada's mineral wealth was depleted at a record rate last year — but producers got record amounts for their efforts.

Statistics Canada reported this week that mineral production during 1972 totalled $6.38 billion, up from $5.97 billion in 1971 and $5.72 billion in 1970.

Mineral and fossil fuels recorded the biggest increases in volume and value as rapidly-rising continental demand squeezed available supplies. As the Statistics Canada report was being released, the United States government announced relaxation of oil import quotas because of scattered shortages of heating oil.

Over-all, Canadian production of fuels increased 15.6 per cent in value to hit an all-time peak of $2.3 billion.

Coal volume rose 13.7 per cent to 20.9 million tons, while coal value jumped 26.6 per cent to $154.2 million.

Natural gas volume increased 14.1 per cent to 2.85 trillion cubic feet while value increased 11.1 per cent to $380.6 million. More dramatic gas value increases may come this year in the wake of an Alberta effort to increase gas prices.

The volume of natural gas byproducts rose 24.8 per cent to 106.9 million barrels, while their value rose 27 per cent to $245.4 million.

Crude petroleum had a volume increase of 12.5 per cent to 554 million barrels and a value increase of 14.1 per cent to $1.5 billion.

Metals presented a mixed picture, with an over-all increase of only 1.8 per cent in value, for a total of $2.99 billion.

Although copper shipments increased 11 per cent in volume, to 800,620 tons, their value fell 6.6 per cent to $809.9 million.

Nickel volume decreased by 12.9 per cent to 256,000 tons, while value fell similarly to $697.5 million.

Iron ore shipments increased in volume by 7.1 per cent to 50.7 million tons, but rose only 1.4 per cent in value to $563 million.

Zinc increased in volume by 5.9 per cent to 1.3 million tons, while zinc value rose 20.7 per cent to $505 million.

Lead volume dropped 8.4 per cent to 512.9 million pounds, while its value increased 4.6 per cent to $114.6 million.

Silver output totalled 48 million ounces, up 5.4 per cent, while total value was $80.5 million, up 12.1 per cent.

Gold production decreased to 2.08 million ounces from 2.26 million, while value fell to $76.6 million from $79.9 million.

The Saskatchewan-based potash industry and the Quebec-based asbestos industry both recorded marginal gains in volume and value of output.

Potash production rose 3.3 per cent to 4.1 million tons and value rose 4.1 per cent to $140.5 million. Asbestos production rose 3.5 per cent to 1.7 million tons, while value increased 7.7 per cent to almost $220 million.

Structural materials such as bricks and sewer pipe rose 7 per cent in value to $534 million, including a 10 per cent increase in the value of cement production, to $210.3 million.

Douglas Challenges Minister

No Choke Planned for Exports

OTTAWA (CP) — Energy Minister Donald Macdonald said Tuesday there are no immediate government plans to impose controls on the export of oil to the United States.

He was replying in the Commons to T. C. Douglas (N D P—Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands) who said a fuel oil shortage in the U.S. and the resulting increase in demand already has produced domestic price increases.

Macdonald said the matter has been studied by the National Energy Board and also has been the subject of consultations with Alberta, but no controls are planned at the moment.

However, he said, the government has taken the position that Canadian oil refineries should be given priority in access to Canadian oil reserves.

Asked by Douglas whether any study has been made of reserves in Alberta, Macdonald said the matter has been under assessment and it appears that, in future, Canada will have to depend increasingly on "frontier" reserves to meet its demands. That means supplies outside established oil fields such as Alberta's.

Outside the Commons, Macdonald said the government will keep close track of oil exports.

Meantime, "I know of no fuel shortage in Canada at the moment."

He told reporters that production of crude oil now is sufficient to meet Canadian demand. If it falls below demand, "the government would have to take steps" to ensure that Canadian needs are met first.

Douglas said outside the House that the government should seriously consider imposing export controls to prevent further increases in domestic oil prices.

Imperial Oil Will Pay More, Get More

TORONTO (UPI) — Imperial Oil announced Tuesday price increases in its principal petroleum products across Canada and a 20 cent a barrel hike in the price at which it will purchase western crude oil.

Imperial Chairman W. O. Twaits said the higher price for Canadian crude oil, much of which is exported to the United States, parallels price increases in the major producing areas outside North America.

Twaits noted wellhead prices of Canadian crudes have increased less than 2 per cent annually over the last decade, including the latest price adjustment.

"In the interval Canadian crude oil producers have been experiencing increased costs of exploration and production and since Jan. 1 higher taxes imposed by the Alberta government," he said.

"It must also be expected that the market value of Canadian crude would rise as world-wide energy costs increase over the next decade."

In Quebec, Ontario and the Atlantic provinces, the products price increases will be one cent per gallon for gasolines and two cents a gallon for diesel, heating and turbo fuels.

In British Columbia and the prairie provinces, dealer motor gasolines will go up one cent per gallon, industrial and consumer gasolines and diesel, heating and turbo fuels two cents a gallon.

Twaits said the new prices reflect the cost increases of Canadian crudes to refiners and recent increases in the costs of imported crude oils to eastern Canada.

Twaits said that since 1967 Imperial's average wholesale price of a gallon of gasoline, excluding federal sales, tax, increased only 16.8 per cent.

Over the longer period, he said, since 1959 Imperial dealer wholesale gasoline price increased an average of less than 1 per cent per year.

Drumheller oil well produces

Alberta Richer

EDMONTON (CP) Alberta Minerals Minister Bill Dickie said Tuesday that the new price increases on crude oil could add $18 million to the provincial coffers this year.

Dickie said that the price increase would be reflected in royalties and taxation collected by the province in 1973.

He also said the Alberta government had not been satisfied with a 10-cent-a-barrel increase announced in November, and the province has been working to obtain a larger increase since. Alberta would continue efforts to get better prices for natural gas, he said.

Field's Takes Over

VANCOUVER (CP) — Vancouver-based Field's Stores Ltd. has purchased for an undisclosed amount all the issued shares of Marshall-Wells Ltd. from Gamble Canada Ltd.

Field's President Joe Segal said the current managers of Marshall-Wells will continue to direct the company's 186 franchise dealerships, retail store operation and its wholesale and industrial accounts business, with its head office in Winnipeg.

□

WINNIPEG (CP) — Funeral services will be held Friday for Mrs. James A. Richardson, 82, for 27 years head of the Winnipeg grain and investment company, James Richardson and Son Ltd. She died Monday.

Mrs. Richardson assumed the presidency of the firm after the death of her husband, James A. Richardson, in 1939. She retired in 1966, having controlled the company longer than any other president except its founder, James Richardson, who established the business in 1857 and directed it until 1892.

GENEVA (UPI) — A total of 13,050,000 people flew the North Atlantic between North America and Europe last year, the International Air Transport Association (IATA) said Tuesday. It was a 15.6 per cent increase over 1971. The total applies to passengers on all aircraft, both scheduled and charter, IATA said.

Did Government's Warning Stop Freight Rate Hike?

OTTAWA (CP) — A government warning to the railways has apparently stalled a general freight rate increase.

Transport Minister Jean Marchand said outside the Commons Tuesday that the railways informed him in a recent meeting that they would like to boost freight rates.

The transport minister said he advised against the move.

"I just told them I thought it would be very badly received by the House at this time."

As the railways have not announced an increase, "I presume they have postponed their decision," Marchand said.

Federal legislation allows the railways to raise rates provided sufficient notice is given to the Canadian transport commission. The law provides for appeal to the commission against freight rates in certain cases.

"I don't think it is in the interests of the country to increase freight rates at the moment," Marchand said.

While the railways legally have the right to increase freight tariffs, the government attitude will undoubtedly carry considerable weight with them.

This is particularly true following the government announcement in the throne speech that it intends to hold meetings with the provinces to discuss the impact of freight rates on regional development and consumer prices.

This review could conceivably lead to closer government control of freight tariffs, observers say, and the railways are unlikely to help draw the noose around their necks by increasing rates against government wishes.

The Conservatives are also concerned about freight rates. James McGrath (St. John's East) pressed in the Commons recently for a freeze on freight rates during the federal-provincial discussions.

Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield also proposed a review of freight tariffs during the recent federal election campaign.

Marchand said he will make no specific proposals to the provinces in the first round of talks on freight rates. He would keep an open mind on the issue.

He said there are "imbalances" in tariffs between different parts of Canada. But it was a complicated issue with many aspects.

For example, there was the question of eastern feed grain producers who seemed to prefer a better price for their product rather than subsidies for freight rates.

VMD Given Contract For Oil Work Hull

Victoria Machinery Depot has been awarded a $90,000 contract to build a steel hull for an underwater maintenance chamber capable of handling the products of three oil wells on the ocean floor, it was announced Monday.

Lockheed Petroleum Service of Vancouver, which also had VMD handle an earlier part of the project, is building the apparatus for work in the Gulf of Mexico.

The hull, 30 feet long and 12 feet in diameter, will be completed by March 1.

Totems Trip Ex-Champions As Hoop Season Underway

Victoria High Totems knocked off the defending champions in one of four games which opened the Victoria High School Boys' Basketball League season Tuesday night.

Totems dumped Belmont Braves, 60-34, at Victoria High School, scoring 20 straight points in the second quarter to break the game open.

John Hampton, who had 27 points to lead the winners, sparked the Totems' surge with 11 points. Braves had battled Totems on even terms in the opening quarter, coming out with a 12-12 tie. Belmont took a 14-12 lead to start the second quarter before the roof fell in.

Steve Rothwell gave Hampton good support with 18 points while Malcolm Moscrop topped the scorers for Belmont with 15 points.

Braves, who won the league and Vancouver Island titles last season, lost only one league game in that stretch, a 50-46 decision to Oak Bay Bays on Jan. 12, 1972.

Bays started off their season with a 70-44 victory over visiting Claremont Spartans. Bays scored the first points of the game and never lost the lead although Spartans tied the game at 2-2 and 4-4.

Chris Trumpy and Brian Sutherland-Brown scored 13 points each for Oak Bay, one more than teammate Grant Boland. Brian Montgomery, who moved to Claremont this season from Reynolds, led Spartans with 13 points.

Highly-rated Mt. Douglas Rams whipped Reynolds Roadrunners, 75-45, at Mt. Douglas, getting 21 points from Kevin Worth and 18 from Doug Mosher. Avtar Bains was Roadrunners' lone scoring threat, getting 23 points.

At Esquimalt, Mount View Hornets had little trouble with the Dockers, romping to a 60-28 win. Dockers put up a good fight in the opening quarter but went to pieces the second quarter when Hornets outscored the hosts, 12-2.

Kevin Gilbert had 18 points for the winners, six more than teammate Dave Hagstrom. Ben Shotton, wearing a bandage to protect a knee cartilage operation and operating at about half speed, topped the Dockers with 10 points.

Hornets were called for only four personal fouls in the cleanly-played game, four less than Dockers.

Ramblers Scramble For Opening Victory

Mt. Douglas Ramblers, reigning B.C. champions, needed a scrambling effort Tuesday night to avoid a season-opening loss in the Victoria High School Girls Basketball League.

Behind by as many as 18 points in the first half, Ramblers finally caught visiting Reynolds Roadrunners in the late stages for a 42-40 triumph.

Mairi Anne Longmore and Alix Bawlf, with 11 and 10 points, respectively, were the Ramblers' leading scorers. Shirley Skaroop had 19 points for Roadrunners, who had a 14-4 lead after one quarter and were ahead, 22-13, at the half.

Belmont Tomahawks, defending league champions, downed the stubborn Tigerettes, 34-27, at Victoria High School in another of the four games on Tuesday night.

Oak Bay, with Marg Mainwaring again showing the way, breezed past visiting Claremont, 35-19. Miss Mainwaring had 14 points for Bays, who held a 23-3 margin at halftime.

Esquimalt Dockettes scored a 30-26, home-court win over Mount View, getting 13 points from Cathy Wilkinson and 12 from Debbie Knowles.

Gord Labossiere scored three goals for the second time this season Tuesday night to lead Houston Aeros to a 7-5 World Hockey Association win over New England Whalers in Houston.

Frank Hughes scored two goals for the Aeros, who trailed, 0-2, early in the first period before tying it up and going ahead to stay on Hughes' second goal late in the second period.

Bob Charlebois and Jack Gibson scored two goals each to help Ottawa Nationals defeat Quebec Nordiques, 7-5, in Ottawa and keep their playoff hopes alive.

Quebec had held a six-point lead over the Nationals for the fourth and last playoff berth in the Eastern Division but Ottawa's win cut the edge to four points.

In Tuesday's other game at St. Paul, Minn., Gary Veneruzzo assisted on the tying goal with 12 seconds of regular time left and then fired in the winning goal at 1:57 of sudden-death overtime as Los Angeles Sharks edged Minnesota Fighting Saints, 4-3.

Canucks Break Slump By Shutting Out Blues

Vancouver Canucks, perhaps jolted by recent criticism, rewarded their fans at Pacific Coliseum with their first shutout at home in the National Hockey League.

Today's game between New York Islanders and Toronto will be telecast on Channel 8 starting at 5 p.m.

Roasted by the sports media in Vancouver, for inept play, the seventh-place club came up with a sterling performance to blank St. Louis Blues, 3-0 Tuesday night.

And it was goalkeeper Dunc Wilson, one of the players singled out as having a bad attitude, who showed the way.

Wilson made 33 saves, many on the spectacular side, to gain his first shutout of the season and second as a Canuck. He was also credited with Vancouver's only other NHL shutout, a scoreless draw against the Maple Leafs in Toronto last season.

In the only other game, Los Angeles Kings edged hapless New York Islanders, 3-2.

Don Tannahill, in his first season as a NHL regular scored only goal the Canucks needed to break a losing streak at four games. Tannahill flipped Andre Boudrias' rebound high over netminder Wayne Stephenson, early in the second period.

The second goal, which put the game out of reasonable doubt, came from defenceman Dennis Kearns on a screen shot from the left point at 15:22 of the final period.

Bryan McSheffrey, recalled from Seattle Totems of the Western Hockey League to fill in for captain Orland Kurtenbach, recuperating from a gall-bladder operation, closed out the scoring with 66 seconds left. McSheffrey banged in a rebound from a Dale Tallon shot.

Wilson was busiest — and best — in the opening period, making 13 saves. One was from a point-blank shot by Jack Egers and the Canuck goalkeeper followed that up with a great glove save on Chris Evans' shot which was headed for the top left-hand corner.

The spirited game produced only one fight. Canucks' Bobby Schmautz and Evans tangling at the end of the second period.

At Uniondale, N.Y., the Kings scored three goals in the opening three minutes and 44 seconds to start the Islanders to their eighth straight loss.

Mike Corrigan started the blitz at 1:29, Serge Bernier clicked 89 seconds later and Vic Venasky closed out the Los Angeles scoring, generating a round of jeers for the hometown Islanders by the 10,143 fans.

Islanders, shut out in their last two games, finally ended their scoreless drought at 176 minutes and 11 seconds when Dave Hudson scored midway through the second period.

Brian Spencer made it close when he scored with more than four minutes remaining but Gary Edwards held the first-year club out the rest of the way for the victory. It moved the Kings into third place in the West Division.

Cournoyer in Hospital

MONTREAL (CP) — Yvan Cournoyer, Montreal Canadiens right winger, entered hospital Tuesday for tests to determine the seriousness of an abdominal injury he suffered in a game Monday night against Minnesota North Stars. He will miss at least one game.

"The doctor thinks its a bruised abdominal muscle but the guy's in real pain," said Sam Pollock, general manager of the National Hockey League club. "It was so bad he was thinking of going to the hospital during the night."

Cournoyer, who scored two goals in the 3-3 tie with the North Stars, was slammed into the boards during the first period by Minnesota defenceman Ted Harris. They were his 25th and 26th goals of the season.

Pollock said Cournoyer will not be in the Montreal lineup when the Canadiens visit the North Stars in Bloomington tonight.

Shutouts a Combined Effort With Toronto Goalkeepers

Ron Low and Jacques Plante are involved in one of the most confusing statistics recorded by the National Hockey League this season.

The Toronto Maple Leaf goalkeepers are listed as having one shutout each but the Leafs have posted four shutouts this campaign.

The other two shutouts came about when the two shared goalkeeping duties on Nov. 25 against California Golden Seals and Dec. 29 against Pittsburgh Penguins.

The Pittsburgh shutout was mostly the work of Low, who played all but the final 24 seconds of the game.

League-statistician Ron Andrews said there were no shared shutouts in 1971-72 but five of the shutouts in 1970-71 were split between two goalkeepers.

The individual lead in shutouts is shared by three players. Ken Dryden of Montreal Canadiens, Cesare Maniago of Minnesota North Stars and Roy Edwards of Detroit Red Wings all have four.

In the individual scoring race, Boston's Phil Esposito maintained his lead but Stan Mikita of Chicago Black Hawks closed in on the Bruin star with a brilliant effort.

While Esposito was picking up his 35th and 36th assists to bring his point total to 60, Mikita scored the first goal and assisted on the next four in the Black Hawks' 5-4 triumph Sunday over the Bruins. The outburst gave Mikita 20 goals and 38 assists for 58 points, two behind the leader and one ahead of Jacques Lemaire of the Canadiens.

Lemaire assisted on two goals Monday by linemate Yvan Cournoyer in a 3-3 tie against Minnesota to move one point ahead of Buffalo Sabres' Rene Robert. Lemaire's 30 goals is tops in the NHL, three more than Robert, and Mikita and Gilbert Perreault of Buffalo, fifth in the scoring race, share the lead in assists with 38.

Cougars Tackle Tough Oil Kings Tonight

Victoria Cougars will ice their strongest lineup tonight when the powerful Edmonton Oil Kings visit Memorial Arena.

Cougars, struggling to snap a losing streak that has reached three games, should have two of their biggest players back in time for the Western Canada Hockey League game which starts at 8.

Winger Don Williams, who suffered an eye injury last week and missed one game, has been given clearance to play.

Defenceman Ed Boucha, out three games with an injured knee, has skated in practice but it will depend on the team doctor's report before game time whether the husky rearguard will see action.

Oil Kings are in a three-way tie for second place in the Western Division, one point behind New Westminster Bruins.

In Edmonton's only appearance in Victoria this season, Cougars scored a convincing 5-2 win.

Cougar general-manager Eric Bishop met for several hours Tuesday with Cliff McNabb, general manager for Nanaimo Clippers of the B.C. Junior Hockey League and discussed possible player changes.

Bishop gave McNabb permission to talk to two players on the Cougar roster with a view to them finishing this season in the BCJHL, where the Cougar-affiliate Clippers are leading the Coastal Division.

McNabb was unavailable for comment Tuesday night.

In league play Tuesday, Saskatoon Blades hammered Calgary Centennials, 5-2; Regina Pats buried Swift Current Broncos, 9-3, and Medicine Hat Tigers topped Winnipeg Jets, 7-4.

In Saskatoon, Dennis Abgrall snapped a scoreless slump at 19 games by firing three goals for Blades, sending Centennials reeling to their fifth straight loss.

Blades increased their lead in the Eastern Division to three points over second-place Flin Flon Bombers.

At Regina, flashy centre Dennis Sobchuk had a seven-point evening for the Pats, scoring three goals and setting up four others. Linemate Mike Wanchuk scored two goals and added three assists.

In Winnipeg, Lanny McDonald, Boyd Anderson and Bob Gassoff scored two goals each as Medicine Hat took period leads of 3-1 and 5-3 in the roughly-played affair.

Hockey Certainly Not for Sissies

NEW YORK (AP) — "Hockey," Gordie Howe once said, "is a man's game." Sissies, he might have added, need not apply.

There is an unwritten rule among hockey players that they shake off injuries and continue to perform. It is nut unusual, for example, for a player to leave the ice to be stitched up and return to action a few minutes later.

Germain Gagnon of New York Islanders scored a goal in the final 30 seconds of a National Hockey League game against Philadelphia Flyers last month. He hasn't played since.

The reason? When he scored that goal, he was playing on a broken ankle.

"Ed Van Impe slashed me on the ankle early in the period," said Gagnon. "I went to the bench when it happened and it didn't feel so good, but I skated the rest of my shifts."

Why?

"I must be tough," the gritty little left winger said.

A few night after Gagnon got his, Gene Carr of New York Rangers took a board check from St. Louis Blues defenceman Bob Plager. The result was a cracked collarbone.

"I was in so much pain that I went to my knees a couple of times," said Carr. The young Ranger made his way to the bench where Emile Francis, general manager-coach of the club, was waiting.

"I think it's gone," said Carr.

"Sit on the bench awhile," replied the boss.

Carr was right. It will be another five weeks or so before he's back in uniform.

"Then," the youngster said, "I'll be able to sit on the bench."

The Rangers, of course, have had their hands full with injuries this season.

"But things are getting better," cracked Francis. Jimmy Neilson got hit twice on the ankle with shots and missed 26 games. Eddie Giacomin got hit in the head with one and got a shutout."

Goalkeeper Giacomin went down like a man who had been shot in the third period of Sunday night's 3-0 shutout against Pittsburgh Penguins. Darryl Edestrand's shot had been deflected off a Ranger stick and cracked Giacomin over his right ear.

"I wasn't unconscious," said Giacomin, "but when you get hit like that, you really don't know if you're hurt."

Neilson, a rugged defenceman, knew he was hurt when he stopped a shot with his ankle in a pre-season exhibition. After missing a fistful of early games, Neilson returned, stuck his foot in front of another shot and broke it again.

He is back again-and still blocking shots kith his skates.

"It was easier to come back the second time. "Nielson said his ankle soaking in a pan of ice water. "I guess I'm getting used to it."

Alec Merriman

Nanaimo Fish and Game Club is seeking new legislation under the provincial Highways Act to provide for establishment of access trails along both sides of all year-round rivers and streams for their entire length and around lakes for their complete circumference.

In a resolution to be placed before the B.C. Wildlife Federation the club calls for access trails to be a minimum of 10 feet in width above normal high water mark.

It suggests there should be no fixed boundaries on such access trails in order to provide for automatic retention of the access route should river or stream channels change over a period of time, or if lake levels are altered for any reason.

"Public access to and along rivers, streams and lakes is, in many areas, severely restricted and is in danger of becoming more so as additional subdivisions are developed adjacent to these bodies of water.

"An increasing population, coupled with decreasing wilderness areas will create an additional demand for public access to and along our rivers, streams and lakes," warns the Nanaimo group.

The club asks that the Highways Act provide for gazetted access to rivers, streams and lakes on at least the same basis as access to salt water.

The Highways Act now provides for saltwater beach access at the rate of 66 feet every 660 feet, with some flexibility to allow for mini-parks. Access to rivers, streams and lakes is required at half that rate . . . 66 feet every 1320 feet.

At present there is no provision under the Act for access ALONG rivers and streams or around lakes.

In this resolution the Nanaimo club is hitting right at the crux of future outdoor recreation in this province. There must be access to all water recreation areas.

Rivers are particularly vulnerable. Access trails along rivers are vital because it is not possible to wade along most rivers. You come to cliffs, banks, deep pools and rapids which bar continued access to the better fishing spots. There simply must be continuous access along rivers.

Certainly there should be good access to all lakes, and access trails around lakes are desirable. But once you reach a lake you can launch a boat and use the entire lake. Most important is the establishment of a number of rather sizable beach and boat access points on all lakes.

This is a resolution which calls for immediate action, because each day the waterfront access in this provnce dwindles more and more.

★ ★ ★

The Nanaimo club has also come up with another powerful resolution which would see pit lampers get stiffer penalties and provide for an automatic life suspension of hunting privileges for anyone convicted of pit lamping.

The unlawful practice of hunting animals at night with the aid of artificial lights, commonly known as pit lamping, is becoming more prevalent in some geographic areas, the Nanaimo members warn.

"Existing enforcement methods and penalties are insufficient to act as a deterent to such unlawful practice and these pit lampers demonstrate their open contempt by such practices as nocturnally killing animals along main thoroughfares and only scant yards from heavily occupied campsites," the resolutiion charges.

The Nanaimo resolution asks the B.C. Wildlife Federation to insist on the provision of additional fish and wildlife branch personnel to patrol major hunting areas during the night-time to further deter "this disgusting and illegal practice."

★ ★ ★

New guidelines for clear-cutting logging on the coast, issued recently by the forest service, contain provisions for protection of range for wildlife. Accordingly, Vancouver Island conservation officers have begun making recommendations to forest rangers concerning 1973 logging plans in an attempt to protect key winter ranges for deer and elk.

Basically, the recommendations will attempt to foster the idea of patch logging as opposed to progressive clear-cutting, since progressive clear-cutting results in the complete denudation of low-level timber.

★ ★ ★

Among the trumpeter swans which returned to winter on Vancouver Island were three with blue plastic collars. The swans were apparently banded in Alaska. Members of the public sighting collared swans are asked to report them to the nearest office of the fish and wildlife branch.

Globetrotters Here Friday

Marquess Haynes, considered to be one of the finest basketball dribblers in the history of the sport, will lead Harlem Globetrotters Friday night in their annual visit to Memorial Arena.

Haynes, a long-time favorite with fans around the world, retired from the tour several years ago and is making his comeback as player-coach.

He will have such stars as Bob "Showboat's Hall and Hubert "Geese" Ausbie, ball-control wizards, in the lineup along with Globetrotter regulars Theodis Lee, Jerry Venable and Mel Davis.

Globetrotters, now in their 47th year of performing, will play New York Nationals starting at 7:30 p.m.

But great basketball isn't all that's in store for Victoria fans.

Globetrotters once again bring an all-star cast of entertainers for pre-game and half-time hilarity.

Featured this year are the Rolan Boys, a Spanish acrobatic team that performs on a tiny board balanced on a barrel, elevated on a platform.

The Rolan Boys are still in their early twenties. Their European training and countless hours of practice are evident in their display of near perfect balance and control.

The Globetrotters will also be featured on the Wide World of Sports television program Saturday, starting at 4:30 p.m. on Channel 8 and 5 p.m. on Channel 4.

Argonauts Sign Ex-NFL Coach

TORONTO (CP) — Toronto Argonauts confirmed Tuesday night that John Rauch, former head coach at Oakland and Buffalo, has been signed to a three-year contract as head coach of the Canadian Football League team.

Argo general manager John Barrow said in a telephone interview from Chicago, where the two met at the annual American Football Coaches Association convention, that he expected Rauch to provide the discipline necessary to make Toronto a winning organization.

"John Rauch will be the type of coach who demands total respect from his players and total discipline," said Barrow.

Rauch, 44, replaces Leo Cahill as head coach. Cahill was dropped after the 1972 Eastern Football Conference season when the Argos finished out of the playoffs.

The only stipulation that Argo management had in the agreement was that at least one of Rauch's three assistants must have been either a coach or assistant coach in the CFL.

The former all-American at the University of Georgia established himself as a top-flight coach at Oakland where the Raiders compiled a 33-8-1 mark during his three seasons, 1967 to 1969.

Oakland, American Football League champions in 1967, were beaten 33-14 by Green Bay Packers in the 1967 Super Bowl., Rauch resigned to join Buffalo in 1969 but after a hassle with Bills' owners he was released in July, 1971.

Tenpinners Begin Local Rolloffs

Helen Young and Andy McLeary took the lead in the two-weekend local rolloffs for the Canadian Tenpin Federation championships.

Mrs. Young bowled a 10-game total of 1800 to top the six entrants in the women's scratch division last weekend at Mayfair Lanes while McLeary was the only competitor in the men's scratch section and had 1864.

Last chance to qualify for the next step — the provincial level — will be held Saturday, with shifts at 2 and 8 p.m.

In the handicap section, Bev Clarke topped the eight entrants with 1121 and Morris Kersey led the five men with 1182.

Qualifiers on a ratio of one in 10 will advance to the provincial finals Jan. 21 at Lucky Strike Lanes in New Westminster. From there, qualifiers at a ratio of one in 50 will step up to the Canadian finals, in Montreal May 20-21.

Bowlers from the national tournament in the scratch division will be selected for the Canadian team which will compete in the Federation Internationale Des Quilleures (FIQ) American zone championships in Bogota, Colombia.

Redskin Veteran Credits Balance

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Linebacker Jack Pardee readily answers the question of why coach George Allen brings Washington Redskins to the Super Bowl after not quite reaching it with Los Angeles Rams.

"The basic difference is that we have a better team in Washington," says the 15-year veteran of professional football wars who spent most of his career with the Rams.

Allen turned the Rams into winners in his five years here and twice reached the playoffs but then the team failed to win in the bid for Super Bowl spots.

Fired two years ago, Allen was promptly hired by Washington and went after some of the key men he had playing for him in Los Angeles.

Pardee, the 36-year-old defensive ace, was one and became the captain of his squad. It was only natural he'd be asked to compare Allen's Ram squads and this one that won the National Football Conference title.

"We have better over-all balance," Pardee said.

"In Charley Taylor and Roy Jefferson we have two great wide receivers. Defensively we have remained healthy. We haven't had players hurt much this year. We have had just good over-all strength and depth.

"I think that would have to be the strength of the team — the over-all balance. We have football's top rusher in Larry Brown, or he would have been if he hadn't missed the final two games of the season.

"All this gives us great offensive balance. Defensively we don't have to cover for anyone. If we want to blitz or go man-for-man, we call whatever we think we need to and we don't have to worry about anybody not doing his job in any situation."

Pardee said Allen's defensive system at Washington calls for more zone defences than he used at Los Angeles, primarily because pro football lately has given more emphasis to the run than in the past.

"Coach Allen tells me what to call and I try to call it," explains Pardee. "We have had success with the zone."

Allen goes for experience and his moves in gaining some older players for the Redskins gained the club the "Over the Hill Gang" nickname.

Yet because of it, Pardee discounts the claim of Miami adherents that the Dolphins will have the advantage Sunday in the Super Bowl because they have been there before.

"I've been in playoff games and I played in the Coliseum 13 years," he says. "Verlon Biggs and Jefferson both have played on Super Bowl winners. Nobody can call us an inexperienced team by any means."

Quiet trails and colour-splashed canyons introduce you to the vivid beauty and changing moods of golden desert country.

Sparkling desert air. Non-stop sunshine. And 5,000 swimming pools, just waiting for you to try one of them on for size. Or you can stretch out by a pool and laze away your days turning a warm and golden brown all over.

2½ miles straight up, the Aerial Tramway takes you to the top of Mt. San Jacinto for a spectacular view.

Hide away from winter in Palm Springs. Laze around the pool, soak up the sun, breathe the warm, dry air and watch the palm trees grow.

GOODBYE shivers and skies of grey. Hello sunshine!

Come feel its warmth, day after glorious day in Palm Springs. The sun never leaves here, except at dusk when skies turn into black velvet, thick-clustered with stars.

Come feel alive again, revived again. Palm Springs has the kind of dry desert air that makes you want to kick up your heels like a kid again. It's a sparkly feeling because humidity is low and mugginess is only a word in the dictionary. In Palm Springs.

Come unwind. Forget work and winter. Get into the pool and the health spas; out on the golf courses and tennis courts. Catch a glimpse of famous names and faces from headlines and movie screens. Try interesting new restaurants, take in top entertainment. Browse boutiques and one-of-a-kind shops.

Even though we're so close to all of Southern California, you may never want to leave Palm Springs. Because we're so far away from winter.

Come on down and have an adventure in the sun!

Close Result Expected in Postal Vote

OTTAWA (CP) — Results of the countrywide voting among postal workers on conciliation proposals are not likely to be released until today, a spokesman for the Council of Postal Unions said today.

The results are being compiled in Ottawa as locals of the 28,000 postal workers were reports to national union headquarters.

Preliminary results available on the board proposals which include recommendations of 65 cents an hour wage increases over a contract ending Dec. 31, 1974, and job security clauses, indicate a mixed response among postal workers.

The national negotiating committee of the unions have urged members to vote against the board recommendations. But early results were that the vote would be close as many union members were going against the suggestion of the national committee.

National postal leaders were in meetings here studying the vote results. It had been said earlier that vote totals would be available this afternoon.

The split vote among the postal clerks and letter carriers voting previously had been reflected in the 6 to 4 division among the negotiating committee. The majority of the committee decided in December to urge rejection of the conciliation proposals.

As voting ended Monday night across Canada, local turnouts to the polls varied widely. Some locals reported heavy voting, while others said only 40 to 50 per cent of membership turned out.

Envy Tours

MEXICO CITY (UPI) — A spokesman at the Mexico City jail said Tuesday prisoners are taken on city bus tours "to make them jealous" of people who are free.

"We are trying to motivate them so they will behave better," the spokesman said, "and then they can get freed more quickly."

Chops A La Font

HUDDERSFIELD, England (AP) — Rev. Peter Spivey, vicar of Meltham village, dipped his fingers into the font to baptize a waiting baby and exclaimed: "Good Lord, three porkchops!"

The unexpected cry started the congregation, but when they saw Spivey, 52, holding high three portions of pig, the Sunday service collapsed into laughter.

Spivey said he could only assume the chops had been inadvertently dropped in the font by a drunk he had found sprawled before the font the previous Saturday night.

Victoria lost one of its outstanding citizens Monday with the death of Mrs. Mabel Scurrah, widow of former mayor Percy Scurrah. She was 85.

The funeral service will be held at 3:15 p.m. Thursday in Sands Memorial Chapel of Chimes, 1803 Quadra.

Mrs. Scurrah had lived in Victoria for 62 years and was a dedicated clubwoman and community worker. In 1951 she was elected the first Canadian president of the International Supreme Chapter of the PEO Sisterhood.

Affectionately known to Victoria residents as the Lady Mayoress Mrs. Scurrah was very much in the public eye during her husband's six-year term of office from 1955 to 1961. She laid the keel for the destroyer-escort HMCS Saskatchewan and launched the ferry City of Victoria, later renamed Queen of Victoria.

Court Told of Stabbing Prelude

'I Love You Very Much'

"I love you very much and I want you to come home with me," a Victoria man told his wife repeatedly minutes before he stabbed her in the kitchen of her duplex early Nov. 5, B.C. Supreme Court was told Tuesday.

Lori Brown, 10-year-old daughter of the woman, told the court of the events leading up to the stabbing of her mother on the second day of the trial of her stepfather, Ernest Lavern Hotvedt.

Hotvedt, 28, is charged with non-capital murder in connection with the stabbing death of his wife, Linda, also 28. Crown counsel Alan Bigelow applied to have the charge changed from murder, to non-capital murder, and this request was granted by Judge Douglas Andrews.

Lori, giving her testimony unsworn as she was too young to be formally sworn, said about 6 or 7 a.m. Nov. 5, her mother, who had been out, came into the children's room in the duplex at 1255 Balmoral, got into bed with them and went to sleep.

A little while later, Hotvedt, apparently awakened from sleep by the noise of Lori's younger brother, came into the room and began shaking Mrs. Hotvedt to wake her up.

He kept saying that he loved her and wanted them all to live together and be a real family again, Lori said, but her mother just kept telling him to go away, that he wasn't supposed to be there.

The parents had lived together until a few weeks before the stabbing, but then had broken up, she testified.

It appeared that during the argument both were becoming very angry, she said, and then the phone rang.

Her mother went to answer it, and Hotvedt followed her to the kitchen.

He had a knife and Lori saw him begin stabbing her mother in the back, she said. Her mother told her and her sisters to go and phone the police and the three girls ran outside to a neighbor's home.

Glen Lorimer, who lived next door at 1251 Balmoral, testified that shortly after 7 a.m. that morning he was awakened by sounds of screaming nd banging at the front door. He went downstairs and found the three girls, whom he knew lived next door.

He returned upstairs and phoned the police, then went back downstairs to wait on the front porch.

He said Hotvedt came out onto his porch with a little boy and asked that the police be phoned.

Told by another neighbor that this had already been done, he asked several times that a doctor also be called, so Lorimer went back into the house and phoned for an ambulance, he said.

Under cross-examination by defence counsel Dermod Owen-Flood, he said Hotvedt appeared to be in shock at that time.

Earlier in the day Dr. Kenneth Thornton, a pathologist at Royal Jubilee Hospital, testified that Mrs. Hotvedt had died of bleeding from seven wounds, which appeared to be stab wounds. The wounds were as much as five inches deep, he said, and had punctured both lungs and her liver, and severed the jugular vein.

William Wayne Buckley, a serviceman and also part-time taxi driver, testified he had driven Hotvedt to the Balmoral Street address about midnight.

At that time it appeared Hotvedt was somewhat intoxicated, for he was unsteady on his feet, he said.

Joan Rothwell, a 14-year-old girl who had been sitting with the children that night, said shortly after midnight she had heard glass breaking and had gone to the kitchen to find someone breaking the glass in the rear door and coming in.

It was Hotvedt, she said, and he paid her and told her to go home and not to tell his wife.

The trial continues today before Andrews and an all-male jury.

Peanut-Choking Death Ruled as Accidental

A Langford child met accidental death Dec. 28 after choking on one or more peanuts and no one was to blame, Greater Victoria Coroner Edmond Jorre de St. Jorre ruled Tuesday.

His announcement followed an inquiry into the death of 1½-year-old Heather Lynn Soderman, daughter of Judy Lynn Soderman, 21, of 649 Atkins, following an incident Dec. 27 at the home of the young mother's parents, John and Dorothy Soderman, 790 Hockley.

Police reports indicated the child was with her aunt, Bonnie Soderman, 18, when the latter left her alone for a few minutes and the child began eating peanuts which were on a coffee table.

The child choked and was taken to Victoria General Hospital, where surgery was performed but she died early the next morning of cardiac arrest.

The coroner also said an inquest will start at 7:30 p.m. today in the Victoria Law Courts into the death of a 10-year-old Vancouver girl in hospital in Victoria Dec. 23, about 12 hours after she was admitted.

The girl, Deanna Jones, had been staying for about a week at the Pacific Centre for Human Development, 3221 Heatherbell, in the Colwood area.

Outstanding Citizen Dies

Victoria lost one of its outstanding citizens Monday with the death of Mrs. Mabel Scurrah, widow of former mayor Percy Scurrah. She was 85.

The funeral service will be held at 3:15 p.m. Thursday in Sands Memorial Chapel of Chimes, 1803 Quadra.

Mrs. Scurrah had lived in Victoria for 62 years and was a dedicated clubwoman and community worker. In 1951 she was elected the first Canadian president of the International Supreme Chapter of the PEO Sisterhood.

Affectionately known to Victoria residents as the Lady Mayoress Mrs. Scurrah was very much in the public eye during her husband's six-year term of office from 1955 to 1961. She laid the keel for the destroyer-escort HMCS Saskatchewan and launched the ferry City of Victoria, later renamed Queen of Victoria.

Mrs. Scurrah was born in Bobcaygen, Ont., and with her family came to British Columbia early in the century. In 1910 she moved to Victoria where she was married to Percival Beall Scurrah in 1914.

Interested in many community efforts, she served on the executive of the Women's Canadian Club for nine years, two of which she was president. During her term of office, the book, Pioneer Women of Vancouver Island was published by the club and Mrs. Scurrah served on the special committee for the project.

She was one of the four presidents who helped to form the Regional Council of Canadian Clubs for British Columbia and served as its president for one term. She also served as the vice-president of the Association of Canadian Clubs of Canada.

As president of the provincial PEO chapter in 1941 she organized its international convention, the largest ever held in Victoria.

She was an active member of the women's auxiliary of the Fairbridge Farm School, Canadian Red Cross Society, YWCA, Canadian Institute of International Affairs, First Church of Christ Scientist, Victoria Symphony Orchestra, Arts Centre, Family Children's Service, National Association of Parliamentarians and women's auxiliary to the Victoria Rotary Club.

Since the death of her husband in July, 1970, Mrs. Scurrah had been a patient at the Aberdeen Private Hospital on Hillside.

She leaves three daughters, Mrs. William (June) Halkett, Mrs. Bernard (Joyce) Kjekstad both of Victoria and Mrs. Gordon (Patricia) Jennings of Ladysmith; eight grandchildren, five great-grandchildren and a sister, Mrs. Stella Welch in North Vancouver.

'TV Would Help MLAs Clean Act'

VANCOUVER (CP) — Live television and radio coverage of the British Columbia Legislature might prompt MLAs to "clean up their act" and dispense with the wrangles that have characterized the House in past years, a broadcast journalist told a special committee of the Legislature which is examining the possible introduction of electronic coverage to the Legislature.

David Shnaider, 23, a deskman in Vancouver for Broadcast News Ltd., said Tuesday the camera and microphone might make MLAs conscious of being more directly in the public eye, and thus lead them to act in a more publicly acceptable manner.

Shnaider emphasized that his appearance at the committee's Vancouver public hearing was personal and in no way representative of the views of Broadcast News, Canadian Press subsidiary which provides newswire and voice report service to private TV and radio stations.

Shnaider, whose views were described as "refreshing" by committee chairman Hugh Curtis, Conservative MLA for Saanich-And-The-Islands, also said TV could be used to permit people in remote centres to participate in legislative committee hearings — without committees leaving Victoria or witnesses from leaving their hometowns.

This could be done through the use of closed-circuit TV, permitting committee members and witnesses to talk to each other via TV over vast distances.

When the House considers introduction of TV coverage, he said, it should not merely copy procedures used by the United Nations or other parliaments — it should "set the pace" and examine the media's potential for "more revolutionary use."

Such a revolutionary use, he said, might be "a question period in the House in which anybody from across the province can ask their question — if someone had a question from, say, Prince Rupert, he could line up at the appropriate time . . . it could be arranged a week in advance."

Ministers or other MLAs then would give their replies instantly by return TV circuit.

Vic Waters, program director for Cable 10, told the committee Vancouver Cablevision and its associated systems were willing to offer a liason officer to work with the subcommittee.

He said that conventional radio and television stations cannot give large amounts of time to coverage of House affairs because of commercial committments but non-commercial channels on cablevision are not so bound.

Curtis said the committee, which has travelled across the country collecting information about parliamentary coverage by radio and television, felt there was a feeling of some concern about whether such coverage would disturb the dignity of legislative proceedings.

Waters agreed that it would be undesirable to have to have people jumping up and down hauling cables and shouting and he suggested a technical committee be set up to discuss the problems involved.

In its second and final day of public hearings today, the committee will hear briefs from the B.C. Association of Broadcasters and the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation.

The committee, which has visited the United Nations, Halifax, Toronto and Edmonton to examine assembly broadcasting facilities, expects to meet with officials of the Victoria press gallery before submitting a report to Speaker Gordon Dowding later this month.

The committee is composed of chairman Curtis, Graham Lea, NDP MLA for Prince Rupert; Robert McClelland, Social Credit MLA for Langley and Phyllis Young, NDP MLA for Vancouver-Little Mountain.

Thieves Set Stage For Quite a Party

Thieves took enough liquor and cash for quite a party from the Argosy Cafe, 769 Fort, Victoria police discovered Tuesday.

The thieves drank and spilled considerable quantities of wine and beer before escaping with $374 in cash and liquor worth $115.

Police said it appeared that the thieves had hidden in an empty banquet room upstairs before the restaurant closed at 6 p.m. Monday night and had looted the place after it had closed.

Inquest Told:

Boy Died in Coma

A coroner's jury was told Tuesday that nine-year-old Paul Beaudry of 3838 Epsom, Saanich, remained in a coma from the time he was hit by a car a week ago until he died Friday of multiple injuries.

Medical evidence and evidence of identification was given at an inquest into the death of the boy.

The first victim of a fatal traffic accident in the Victoria area this year, Beaudry was hit by a car at the junction of Cedar Hill Cross Road and Epsom, last Wednesday morning.

Dr. Frank Berry, a pathologist at the Royal Jubilee Hospital, told the court Beaudry died of contusion and hemorrhage of the brain, fracture of the skull and shock and hemorrhage resulting from other injuries.

The boy also had a broken arm and hip and internal injuries, said Berry.

Dr. John McCracken, who attended the boy at the Royal Jubilee Wednesday, said Beaudry was in a deep coma and did not respond to various pain stimuli.

"There was evidence of severe brain damage," he said.

McCracken said after surgery Wednesday until he died Friday, "he needed to be maintained on a breathing machine."

A family friend, Paul Bacon gave evidence of identification.

Coroner Edmund Jorre de St. Jorre adjourned the inquest to Saanich police courtroom at 7:30 p.m. Monday.

Transport Talks Held

Transportation problems of western Canada were the reason for a meeting in Victoria Monday of B.C. Trade Minister Alex Macdonald and cabinet ministers of the Alberta and Saskatchewan governments, a Macdonald aide said later. Macdonald was not available for comment.

Visiting Macdonald, who is also attorney-general, were Saskatchewan Highways Minister Eiling Kramer and Alberta Industry Minister Fred Peacock.

Large Operators 'Unco-operative'

Causeway Firms Fear Squeeze

By HUBERT BEYER
Colonist Reporter

Several Victoria sightseeing firms based on the Causeway fear they are on the verge of being pushed out of business, says Bill McClarty, general manager of London Omnibus Tours Ltd.

He says their fears are based on the failure of sightseeing firm operators to agree on measures that would stop the carnival-like atmosphere caused by a multitude of hawkers selling tickets for sightseeing tours at Victoria's Inner Harbor during the summer.

McClarty said Tuesday it looks as if the small, independent firms would be the ones to lose everything, while those allied with the CPR would end up with a monopoly on sightseeing enterprises.

Firms operating sightseeing vehicles from the Causeway in front of the Empress Hotel were told recently by Victoria to take steps that would reduce the number of hawkers.

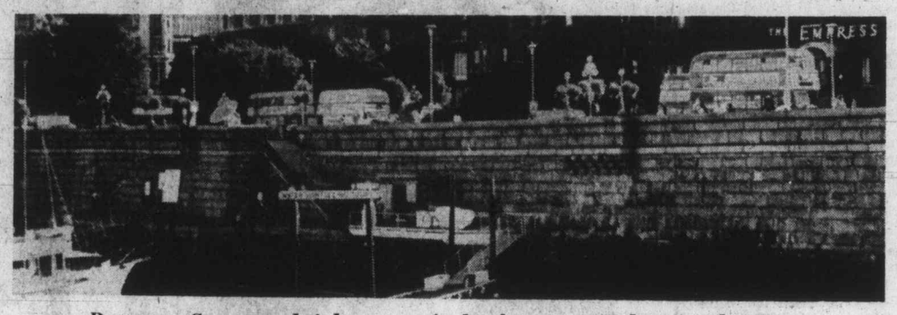
The city warned operators to find a solution to the problem or face eviction from city streets.

McClarty said two meetings have been held so far between sightseeing firm operators and representatives of the Empress and CP steamship service, but no agreement has been reached.

The trouble, he said, is that the operators of two companies which have the exclusive right to sell tickets on Empress grounds and on the CPR docks below Belleville aren't very interested in finding a solution.

If all firms were banned from city streets, Grey Lines and Royal Blue Lines would still be able to operate from the Empress lawn which they do now, he said.

The two firms, he added, had nothing to lose and everything to gain if the city made the Causeway off-limits to sightseeing vehicles and hawkers.



Buses on Causeway bright pawns in battle among sightseeing hawkers

McClarty said the other firms had proposed to reduce by one-half the number of hawkers on the Causeway if the Empress Hotel would stop the practice of letting Royal Blue Lines and Grey Lines solicit business on its grounds.

But the Empress, he added, had maintained the position that it was bound to this arrangement by contract with the two firms.

What really annoyed him, McClarty said, is that one of the firms, Royal Blue Lines, is government-owned.

The firm is owned by B.C. Hydro which is a provincial crown corporation.

"We even believe that B.C. Hydro is planning to bring in some doubledecker buses which would kill us unless the city did it first," McClarty said.

At present, Royal Blue Lines operates regular buses. McClarty said the company is already at a distinct advantage because if doesn't pay fuel tax, business tax or licence fees.

"That comes to about $750 for each bus which Royal Blue doesn't have to pay. How can a small independent operator compete against that?" he asked. London Omnibus Tours Ltd. operates four doubledecker buses.

Loan Granted For Sewage Outfall Line

If all goes well, the shoreline at Victoria's Clover Point sewage outfall will be free of pollution caused by raw sewage at the end of the summer Mayor Peter Pollen said Tuesday.

Pollen based his hopes on the approval Monday by the Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation of a $2 million loan for the planned construction of an outfall extension at Clover Point.

At present, more than three million gallons of raw sewage a day leave the existing outfall on the beach.

Extension of the outfall, Pollen said, would be the first step in the Capital Regional Board's plans to bring Victoria's sewage problem under control.

At a later stage, the McMicking outfall in Oak Bay is to be connected to the extended Clover Point outfall. At present, the McMicking outfall is responsible for the deposit of more than two million gallons of raw sewage a day on the shoreline.

According to the regional board's plans, the combined outfalls are to be channelled into the existing Macaulay Point outfall if, at some future date, the sea should no longer be able to handle the amount of sewage flowing through the proposed Clover Point extension.

At that time, a sewage treatment plant would be built at Macaulay Point. Land for this facility has already been reserved.

The mayor pointed out, however, that it might be years before it might be necessary to reroute the combined McMicking-Clover Point flow into the Macaulay outfall.

Tidal action, currents and water depths, he said, are capable of handling a far greater amount of sewage than will flow through Clover Point during the next few years.

Pollen said construction on the Clover Point extension could begin as soon as the provincial government's pollution control branches approves the necessary permit.

No difficulties are expected. The Social Credit government was opposed to the extension of the Clover Point outfall but the city has had assurances from the new government that there will be no further delay.

Demerit Cases Backlogged

Victoria Provincial Court's traffic section faces a backlog of up to 58 hearings now that the demerit-point system for B.C. drivers, thrown out in November by a similar court in Vancouver, has been reinstated by the B.C. Supreme Court.

Traffic court officials said Tuesday 29 disputes of traffic violation reports for minor driving offences had been on the agenda before the Vancouver lower court ruled Nov. 16 the point system was unconstitutional and discriminatory.

On instructions from the provincial attorney-general's department police continued to issue the violation reports while an appeal was awaited. In that time, the court officials said, another 29 disputes were recorded by drivers although some may settle out of court.

The number of violation reports issued by all Greater Victoria police forces between Nov. 16 and Monday was not known but 443 went out in Victoria alone in December, indicating a small dispute percentage despite the difficulties of the point-system law.

Dispute hearings normally do not take long in traffic court but the backlog still may take several weeks to clear.

The Vancouver ruling included a claim that the point system was discriminatory because the $10 a driver must put up before lodging a dispute could be better afforded by some than others.

But Justice E. E. Hinkson of the B.C. Supreme Court ruled Monday in Vancouver the system was constitutional and not discriminatory. B.C.'s basic argument for the appeal had been that the point system gave the public better protection than any other, including the formerly-used fines.

Detailed Planning Begins For Joint School Project

With legal difficulties apparently out of the way, detailed planning for joint school-municipal facilities at the soon-to-be-built Saanich Community high school will begin almost immediately.

The Greater Victoria school board's facilities committee Tuesday night agreed to write Saanich inviting the municipality to enter into an agreement on the development and operation of shared facilities at the school at Burnside and Acorn.

Suggestions the board will make for sharing include a swimming pool, a health unit, a community information centre, an auditorium or theatre with a stage, a community library, and added floor space for the gymnasium.

However, trustees made it clear that other suggestions from Saanich would also be welcomed.

A meeting last week between Education Minister Eileen Dailly, Municipal Affairs Minister James Lorimer and school board and Saanich officials ironed out many legal difficulties when the ministers said that legislative changes would be introduced at the 1973 legislative session to allow school-community sharing.

It is hoped final planning details from the education department for the school will be available within the next few weeks and the architects will then be able to begin preparing detailed sketch plans.

The committee hoped that agreement with Saanich would be concluded soon so all architectual planning could be done at once.

The school is scheduled to open in September, 1974.

The facilities committee and the business committee also:

- Recommended that architectural reports on all district schools be commissioned to help the board in beginning its five-year school plan. It is hoped the reports will be finished by March 1.
- Endorsed unanimously the $1.66 million building referendum Feb. 17.
- Decided to keep the present method of electing trustees on an at-large basis and not return to the ward system.

Apathetic Citizens Sell Out Controls?

City councils in general and Victoria city council in particular are in the hands of developers, largely because of the apathy of citizens, an urban affairs commentator told members of the Victoria Sierra Club Tuesday evening.

In Victoria, according to the commentator, Mike Crampton of Vancouver, Mayor Peter Pollen is "vaguely committed to change, but proceeds in an incoherent way." He was hampered by lack of support from a knowledgeable citizens bloc.

Crampton, a CBC commentator said developers are at the stage of being a self-regulating body in land management within municipalities.

He pointed out that in Victoria there is a board of variance, which has control of various zoning matters which are not on a large enough scale to go to public hearing. The board he said, has the potential to create land values through re-zoning for development.

"The board in Victoria has five members, three of whom, without doubt, are connected with the property industry, and possibly a fourth as well."

The fourth man, said Crampton is listed as an investment man without mention of the type of investments. He did not name the members.

This board, he said, operates in a kind of publicity vacuum, and its members are appointed, not elected.

Generally in Canadian cities, initiative in development is solely in the hands of business, said Crampton, while local government is purely reactive, reflecting the power in the hands of developers.

Change, he said, could come only through well-informed groups who could take over city government.

He spoke of the clash between economic growth and social growth, emphasizing that studies have shown that in highrise development there comes a stage where the social cost outstrips the economic saving of servicing many people in one particular area.

In Victoria, he said, change should come only after about two years of "brainstorming" which should provide plans for population control, transportation policy, economic growth policy and possible locations for highrises if necessary.

Canadian Tournament Eyed

Little League Grant Tabled

A request to Saanich council by the Greater Victoria Little League for a $3,000 grant to help stage the Canadian Little League Championships at Lambrick Park in August was tabled Tuesday by the council's finance and legislative committee.

In a letter to council Wilf Cain, district administrator for Little League, said the championships "will bring considerable advertising and promotion to the municipality of Saanich and give the biggest display possible to the wonderful achievement at Lambrick Park."

The winner of the tournament, which was held at Hampton Park in 1966 and again in 1969, will represent Canada in a week-long world series championship with 32 countries competing at Williamsport, Pennsylvania.

The finance and legislative committee, with Ald. Leslie Passmore in the chair, decided to recommend Saanich council approve a request for a $300 grant from the Saanich Minor Hockey Association.

The association is scheduled to stage a bantam hockey championship tournament on the weekend of March 17 with five teams competing. The $300 dollar grant will be used to pay ice rink charges at the George Pearkes arena.

The committee also recommended Saanich council approve a grant of $200 for Reynolds high school bands auxiliary. The school band will tour California April 26-May 3. However, a motion was passed at the meeting that no such grant for any school in the future would exceed $200.

In other business Fire Chief Harold Gains told the fire and defence committee chaired by Ald. Sandy Noel that two new fire trucks to be ordered by the end of the month will have to be fitted with an anti-pollution device which would reduce operating horsepower.

But Gains allayed aldermen's fears that the new pollution-free fire pumpers would not prove fully effective. He said that Burnaby fire department had recently bought a fire truck of a similar specification to those due to go into operation in Saanich and officials were "well pleased with it." Closing date for tenders on the Saanich fire trucks is Jan. 22.

Blood Donors Required

The Canadian Red Cross Society has an urgent need for 250 blood donors at clinics Monday and Tuesday.

"That's the absolute minimum," a spokesman said Tuesday.

Clinics will be held at Red Cross House, 1046 Fort, from 2:30 to 4:30 p.m. and 6:30 to 9 p.m. Monday and from 1:30 to 4:30 p.m. and 6:30 to 9 p.m. Tuesday. A clinic held Tuesday at HMC Dockyard was attended by 187 donors.

Radio Stolen

Save Salmon Plea Sent to Minister

Demands for immediate action to save salmon threatened by extinction in Tofino area rivers are contained in telegrams being sent today to federal Environment Minister Jack Davis and provincial Conservation Minister Bob Williams.

Victoria Sierra Club spokesman John Willows said Tuesday a tour of the rivers and creeks around Tofino showed log jams two to three years old which prevented salmon getting through to spawn, so that runs in that area are threatened.

Existing regulations against such developments should be enforced, he said, and there should be federal and provincial co-operation in enforcement and preservation.

It'll Be Warmer, Rain or Snow

Warmer weather bringing with it a possibility of snow is expected to reach the Victoria area by Friday says the weather office at Pat Bay airport.

It depends whether the low pressure system expected from the Pacific reaches here during the night when it is cold or during the day. If it arrives Thursday night there is a good chance of snow, but if it waits until Friday it will probably bring rain. Either way it should get warmer, according to the weather office.

Danish Children's Magazine Has Devoted Following

Without Raspberryfizz Life's a Skinned Knee

COPENHAGEN — Stroget, Copenhagen's "walking street," is a parade ground and a natural meeting place for the new and unusual. The several blocks that form it wind through the Danish capital and are open only to pedestrian traffic.

The street is lined with bakeries, boutiques, and restaurants of every size and shape. A stroll down Stroget is likely to be full of surprises.

Its magic seems reflected in a tall, costumed young man who, with his patchwork upholstered baby carriage, makes a daily tour of the walking street. Tourists tend to write him off as eccentric, but they always take time to stop and stare in fascination.

Danes would recognize the man as Sigvaldi.

Sigvaldi's baby carriage is no ordinary one. For several years it has provided the transportation for a magazine called Hindbaerhrus og Kravtaer (Raspberryfizz and Scribbles), the most original children's magazine in Denmark.

Sigvaldi is a people magnet with a special interest in little people. His free-flowing ideas about life conflicted with studies in French and mathematics, so he took time out for travel and work as a translator. More than three years ago he got the idea for a magazine that would encourage children to share their ideas, drawings, and stories with others.

The idea was presented to established publishing companies, but none would accept a magazine written and illustrated by children. Sigvaldi's determination overcame his inexperience, and he decided to publish the magazine himself.

Contact was made and children, their teachers, and parents sent poems, short stories, and drawings from all over Denmark. Even the title was suggested by the children.

With the magazine's originator as editor, spelling errors and grammatical mistakes remain to add a special flavor to the writing. The direct, matter-of-fact approach is characteristic.

Perhaps the beauty and simplicity of Raspberryfizz is captured by an essay written by a fifth-grade boy, Hans Christian, who compared his own way of life with that of his ancestors:

In Viking times they didn't have speed boats, they had sail boats that you started yourself by rowing. And they didn't have cars either. Instead of a car they had a horse. Their house was made out of straw and wood and hide. Our house is made of stone, if it isn't a summer house, and there are windows and a chimney. In the old Viking house there are just some holes which they decided are chimney and window. The chimney should preferably be in the roof. The well with the clear water is a round hole with water in it which you can hoist a bucket with a rope. Now the water is polluted and tastes disgusting and so it must be pumped. In the old days you could just play. A toy was a bow and arrow. Now there are new toys, more effective, that is a rifle with bullets . . . In the old days when they wanted to read a book they couldn't go to the library. A man had to sit and carve out of stone in his spare time. They don't do that any more, they wouldn't hear of it. He sits and reads and listens to the radio and watches television . . . Now you know about it.

Imaginative logic is responsible for many of the stories. Pernille, a nine-year-old girl, used a letter to explain a tricky situation. "Dear dad and mom and grandma and freddy and lise. If I was a prince or a sheik or a millionaire I would send a sports car to you, but I turned out to be a girl."

Each edition includes illustrations on topics from "Little Red Riding Hood on roller skates just after getting a spanking" to spiders and crocodiles. Children as young as three send in their drawings.

Teachers are impressed and sometimes use the magazine to real aloud or inspire their own students. Children actively relate to the stories and anxiously make up their own.

As Raspberryfizz and Scribbles became popular, Sigvaldi had to make a decision about distribution. Since local publication had been successful, he decided to try local distribution. Stroget was the obvious place, and when he stumbled on an old baby carriage in his attic, it seemed to be natural transportation for a young, growing magazine.

Children are drawn by the red-haired man's warm smile and brightly patched carriage. Groups of them often meet Sigvaldi on Stroget and talk and joke with him. He is usually ready with a game, a puppet, or a musical instrument to delight his audience.

In addition to a large number of individual sales on the walking street each day, Sigvaldi also mails copies of the magazine to 700 subscribers in Scandinavia, the Faroe Islands, Greenland and England. As one of these subscribers has said, "Without Raspberryfizz and Scribbles, life is a skinned knee."

Search for Eternal Youth

Beetles, Mice and Aging

LONDON (Reuter) — Beetles and mice are the latest pioneers in man's increasingly exciting search for a way to arrest the process of growing old.

Although scientists are still far from finding a formula for everlasting life, or even a temporary rejuvenation pill, a more complete understanding of the aging process is unfolding almost daily.

Five researchers have disclosed dramatic experimental results.

In one experiment, Drs. Stanley Beck and R. K. Bharadwaj of the University of Wisconsin reversed the developmental program of the larva of a beetle called trogoderma glabrum. In effect, they made it grow younger.

In the second experiment, three Europeans almost tripled the normal life span of a type of dwarf mouse by injecting it with cells taken from normal mice.

One of the favorite theories on aging is that it results from the steady accumulation of small errors in the way the body translates proteins into cells, resulting eventually in a breakdown of the cellular metabolism.

One of the first effects of such breakdown occurs in the body's natural immunological defence system, the theory goes.

To study this effect more closely, the European scientists — Dr. N. Fabris of the University of Padua, Italy, and Dr. W. Pierpaoli and E. Sorkin of the Swiss Research Institute at Davos, Switzerland — selected a species of dwarf mouse called the Snell Bagg variety.

The special thing about these mice is that, due to a genetic fault, they grow old and die within five months, compared with 20 months for the normal mouse. Snell Bagg mice do not produce the proper amount of growth hormones, which in turn inhibits the lymphoid tissues, particularly those of the thymus gland. The function of the thymus, at the base of the neck, is still not fully understood, but many believe it plays a vital part in aging.

Fabris, Pierpaoli and Sorkin, reporting in the science journal Nature, said their experiments on the dwarf mice emphasized "the possible importance of the thymus as a biological clock" as well as the significance of the hormones in cellular aging processes.

What they did was to inject the tiny, prematurely aging mice with growth hormones from a normal mouse. They found they could postpone the aging process. They attributed this effect to the stimulation of the immunological defensive mechanisms.

Taking another approach, Beck and Bharadwaj are studying the relationship between development and aging. They chose to experiment on the larva of the beetle because of its clear two-stage development: The larval and adult sequence.

They found that simply by depriving the larva of food and water, they could turn back its development, making it grow smaller and smaller until it was fed, when it began the whole growing process again.

The Americans' most remarkable result, reported in Science magazine, was to produce larvae more than two years old. This compares with a normal two-months life span from egg to death of the mature trogoderma glabrum beetle.

Ailing Whale Eats and Dies

NEW YORK (AP) — A rare beaked whale died shortly after a doctor at New York aquarium described its condition as "wonderful." The 900-pound whale had just dined on two fish and two squid — its first meal since leaving Beach Haven, N.J., Friday. It was found unconscious on a beach there Tuesday.

Beef Stew Tests Won by Potatoes

OTTAWA (CP) — Some canned "beef stew" should probably be relabelled "potato stew," a report by the Consumers' Association of Canada says.

In its magazine Canadian Consumer the association said it tested 12 different brands of canned beef stews available in most supermarkets and found that the main solid ingredient was potatoes in all brands except one.

"The potato content was so high . . . that we wonder if these products should not be renamed potato stew," the article said. One brand had 35-per-cent potatoes.

Composition of canned beef stew is not governed by any specific standards, the article said. This means that consumers have no assurance of the amount of beef present. The average meat content in the samples ranged from 7 per cent to 17 per cent.

The article recommended specific standards should be drafted for canned stew.

"These standards should require that the label state the actual percentage of meat in the formulation and that gravy be listed as an ingredient."

The amount of gravy in the samples ranged from 40 per cent to 53 per cent, the article said. In every sample, it was the main ingredient, but only one brand listed it at the top of the list of ingredients.

All the other manufacturers did list solid ingredients beginning with potatoes.

However, the association's analysts found that list and the contents often differed. In one sample, the list of ingredients read potatoes, beef, carrots and peas.

This was incorrect, the article said. It should have read potatoes, peas, beef and carrots.

The brands studied, listed according to the average meat content from highest to lowest, were: Bounty, York, Cordon Bleau, Heinz, Clark, Swifts, Puritan, Schneiders, Green Giant, Burns, I.G.A. and Valiant.

Double Knits Probed

OTTAWA (CP) — The revenue department has made a preliminary finding of dumping in Canada of double knit fabrics with man-made fibre content originating in the United Kingdom, it was announced Monday.

The move means that import duties will be assessed immediately pending the outcome of an investigation to determine whether such goods actually have been marketed in Canada at prices below the fair price in the originating country and whether this has harmed Canadian manufacturers.

Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: I must comment about the girl who signed her letter Red Face because it reminded me so much of my own life. That girl was embarrassed because her mother couldn't seem to get her friends' names straight.

I am 16. My sister is four years older. We look a lot alike and I understand why my mother would call me by her name. But what bugs me like crazy is that the teachers are constantly calling me by my sister's name no matter how many times I correct them. One teacher was so embarrassed about it that she stopped calling on me altogether. Another teacher is now calling me by my last name because she can't seem to get my first name straight.

I guess what bothers me, deep down, is that my sister makes such a lasting impression on people that they never forget her — and me, well, I'm just a blob. Any comment you care to make will be appreciated. — Her Nothing Relative.

Dear Friend: Your teachers call you by your sister's name because they knew her first — not because she was a superstar, unforgettable — or anything else. So stop interpreting the confusion as a put-down. It is no such thing.

□

Dear Ann Landers: Please print this letter. My husband reads your column every single day so I know he'll see it. Somehow I can't tell him this to his face. I would rather die than hurt his feelings. It's his teeth. He's a very good looking guy — until he opens his mouth. He needs to see a dentist.

He has so many fine qualities that I just hate to pick on him for any reason, so I keep quiet. But I want him to have a healthy mouth and I also feel it is important that he make a good appearance. Thanks for your help, Ann. — Love The Guy.

Dear Woman: If you love the guy, don't wait for him to read this. Call a dentist and make an appointment for your husband. Tell him, but not too far in advance. And by all means, go with him.

Most adults who neglect their teeth are afraid of pain. What they need to know is that dental techniques today are much easier on the patient, less time-consuming, and bear no resemblance to the torture chambers of 30 years ago.

Aside from the cosmetic aspects, neglected teeth and gums can cause serious physical problems. Like I said, if you love the guy, help him.

Fated To Meet?

Just Blind Chance, Mathematicians Say

Colonist-Gemini Services

It's a small world, and it is possible to prove it. Like this.

Next time you want to send a letter to a stranger in another town, don't send it to him directly. Instead, send it to a friend who lives in the same part of the country as the stranger. Tell him to send the letter on to someone he knows who might be a friend of the intended recipient. Instruct him to keep this going until the letter ends up with someone who knows the man it's addressed to.

How many steps do you suppose it would take before the letter ended up with someone who knew the addressee? Fifty? A hundred? More? No. Far fewer.

According to tests carried out in the United States, your letter would reach its destination after passing through no more than 10 pairs of hands. In some cases, it could happen with as few as two links, and the most likely number of people involved would be five.

All the people in the tests were on first-name terms with the people they forwarded the letter to. So it's really not surprising that we meet strangers in odd places — such as on holiday — and find that they know our good friends Jack and Jill back at home.

Fate? Not at all, say the statisticians. Pure chance, more likely.

And what about the young couples who were 'fated' to meet, or 'made just for each other' because their birth dates match so closely? It's that small world again.

If you're at a medium-sized party with a few dozen guests, the chances are that nine times out of 10 there will be someone else there with the same birth date as your own.

How many happy friendships have started with the exchange: "Your birthday is on the first of May? Mine's the first of June. What a coincidence . . ." A few drinks later, and it's all happening.

Is it fate? No. Lady luck would be a better name. Even in the smallest groups, the mathematicians calculate, it's still odds on that two of you will have birthdays within a month of each other.

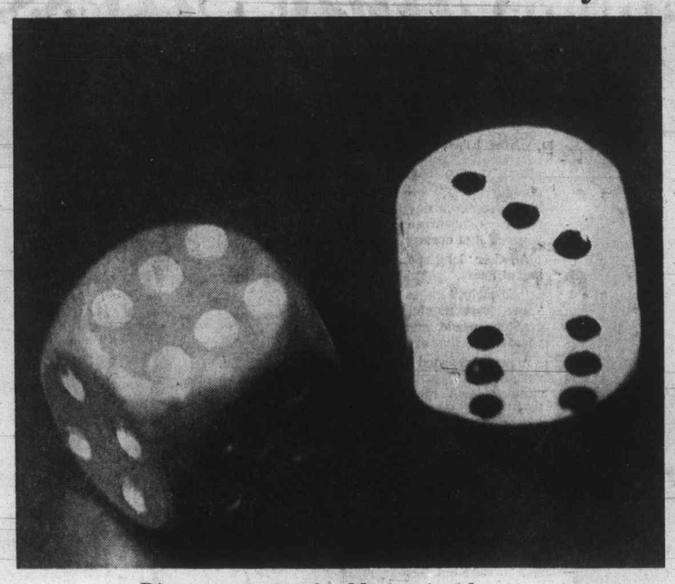
The world abounds with odd coincidences, and many people make a habit of hunting them down, in the belief that they illustrate some kind of underlying order to life.

The mathematicians maintain that more coincidences occur through blind chance than even believers in the occult realize. Writer G. K. Chesterton mentioned that a man named Williams walked into a strange house and murdered a man named Williamson . . . World chess champion Bobby Fischer was born under the sign of Pisces, the fish . . . the last three letters of the name of John Philip Sousa, composer of patriotic American marches, are USA.

How many times have you been thinking of someone, only to receive a phone call from him? Or been reading someone's name in the newspaper when he or she are mentioned at the same time on TV?

Think also of the confusion two people in the same hospital with the same name has caused in operating theatres — sometimes with gruesome results. Coincidences like this happen far more often than the occasional stories in newspapers suggest.

One of the weirdest coincidences of all appeared in advertisements in the New Yorker magazine seeming to contain a secret message about the Japanese raid on Pearl Harbor in the Second World War.



Dice game one of oddest coincidences

In the issue for Nov. 22, 1941, 16 days before the attack, the New Yorker ran two adverts headed Achtung! Warning! Alerte! They were for a dice game called The Deadly Double, supposedly to help people kill time in air raid shelters. In part of one ad was shown two dice. On the visible faces were the numbers XX, 12, 24, 0, 7 and 5. In another ad, the XX symbol was repeated in the body of a double-headed German eagle.

Of the above numbers, 12 and 7 (Dec. 7) give the date of the Japanese attack. The 0 and 5 could have been the planned time (the actual attack came at 07.00 hours). And XX (20) is roughly the latitude of Pearl Harbor. The figure 24 remained unaccounted for.

FBI agents actually visited the dice game's manufacturers after the raid but found no evidence that the ads were the work of Japanese intelligence agents. The whole thing had to be written off as 'one big coincidence'.

Coincidence hunters have gone to work on the ads, and found an even more astounding prediction. That issue of the New Yorker came out on Nov. 22, 1941. It was also on Nov. 22 that John F. Kennedy was assassinated. Add 22 to 1941 and you get 1963, the year of the assassination.

Assuming that the XX in the dice game ads means two X's are to be added to the alphabet, the following fact emerges.

Take the number 12 shown on the dice, and count to the 12th letter of the alphabet - L. Then take the 24 and continue the count, including the two X's and going back to A again. This gives the letter H. Take the 7 and count forward again - giving O. The three letters L, H, O are the initials of President Kennedy's assassin, Lee Harvey Oswald.

No one can calculate how 'improbable' such a coincidence is. Yet it happened — along with countless other 'improbable' events which occur to people all the time. Perhaps to you?

Children's TV Ad Ban Idea Hotly Debated

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Federal Communications Commission heard various citizens groups Monday endorse a proposal to ban commercials from children's television programs, while opposition to the idea came from industry and advertisers.

All three U.S. networks assailed the proposal, as did the National Association of Broadcasters, as one which would put the federal government more deeply into the business of dictating program content to broadcasters.

Action for Children's Television, a citizens' group with headquarters in Newtonville, Mass., petiioned the commission about two years ago to ban commercials on children's TV programs, and to require at least 14 hours of weekly programming for age groups between two and 12.

Speaking for the organization, Peggy Charren and Evelyn Sarson, president and executive director, respectively, told the FCC at the opening session of 2½ days of hearings that their proposal is feasible.

"It is possible for a commercial TV station to run children's programming without commercials," they said. "It is possible to attract a sizeable audience for quality children's programs."

A question on the point was raised by Howard Monderer, Washington lawyer for the National Broadcasting Co.

"We have tried on a planned basis over the past seven years to do what our critics are asking you to force us to do," he said. "The response from children has been a decline in audience participation."

He said NBC has tried to develop diversified quality programs for children and has lost 25 per cent of that audience in the last several years, while CBS and ABC have gained young viewers.

Thomas Frohock, a lawyer for American Broadcasting Co., said ABC rejects the proposal to ban commercials, "in part because it is impractical and in part because it would lead almost certainly to a decline in programming for children."

He said the proposal to require a certain number of children's programs is "a further attempt to prescribe by federal edict" what broadcast stations shall provide.

Michael Goldey, a lawyer for Columbia Broadcasting System, said his network regards the ACT proposal as extremely unwise, and said there is no evidence to support the theory that it would result in better programs.

Dr. William Melody of the University of Pennsylvania testified that a study he made for ACT shows that commercials could be ended gradually over five to seven years without financial hardships for broadcasters.

He said external financing could come from a variety of sources including institutional advertising, underwriting by companies and foundations, and government agencies.

Right at Home In Stamp World

When Faith Angus talks about the "dear old Beaver" she doesn't mean the pioneer coastal ship.

The Weeping Princess to her is no fairy tale, and when she writes to wove paper her use of English is still impeccable.

Faith Angus, whose weekly Stamp Packet appears in the Colonist, is probably the only woman philatelic columnist in Canada. Hers is a subject with a language all its own and a fascination that many find difficult to understand. Yet she gets its messages across. "People who never look at a stamp tell me they read my articles," she says.

She carried on the column after the death of her husband, Ronald, 10 years ago. He was an award-winning collector, stamp shop proprietor, first stamp broadcaster in Canada, and dedicated worker for the advancement of philately.

"We used to sit up half the night poring over stamps;" she recalls, his interest being the stamps of Great Britain and what are still in the hobby called the Colonies.

Mrs. Angus says she no longer collects stamps but if she were to start again her choice now as then would be stamps depicting animals, birds, insects and flowers. She is a naturalist who admires good designs "even of creepy things like snakes."

Her complaints of modern stamps are few, but she thinks some countries are issuing too many. "Many collectors are getting fed up with too many issues," she says. "Some of the new independent states have discovered a lucrative source of revenue in stamps and are overdoing it."

Because of the super-abundance, the game is becoming more specialized. As Mrs. Angus says, "to be a world collector today you need to be a millionaire."

Faith Angus

Stamp collecting can also become too precious, she says. "A well-hinged mint stamp isn't damaged, yet some collectors won't look at it."

She believes in encouraging children to collect stamps — low value inexpensive stamps of different countries, through bulk or packet buys from dealers and via pen pals. A fancy album isn't necessary; a simple scribbler and a packet of hinges will suffice.

The young collector gains not only an absorbing hobby but a wealth of general information. "It's a wonderful help with schoolwork, especially geography — and history," she says.

Mrs. Angus' own roots on the west coast go back a long way. She was born in Victoria and has lived here all her life. Her mother was born here when British Columbia was a Crown colony, and her father was with the Hudson's Bay Company at its northwestern B.C. outposts.

If anything intrigues Faith Angus as much as stamps or animals it's books. For more than 15 years she has been with Adelphi Book Shop on Fort.

'Miracle' Says Dad Of Quints

EVANSTON, Ill. (AP) — James Baer says his house is "short five bedrooms" but he still calls the birth of quintuplets to his wife a "miracle and a blessing."

"I don't know what one baby costs, let alone five," Baer told reporters Monday at Evanston Hospital, where the five-day-old quints were taken shortly after their birth Friday in Highland Park Hospital.

The three girls and two boys born to his wife, Lynn, 26, were the Baer's first children.

The 30-year-old Northbrook stockbroker confirmed reports that his wife had taken fertility drugs and added: "If we had it to do over again, we would have repeated everything we've done. My wife and I wanted a family more than anything in the world and God knows we finally succeeded . . ."

The infants, ranging in weight from one pound, 11 ounces to two pounds, 14 ounces, are "beyond the most difficult period" said Dr. Thomas Gardner, the specialist caring for them.

Dr. Gardner guessed the infants will spend two months in Evanston Hospital, a referral centre for premature and high-risk babies.

Mrs. Baer was reported in excellent condition in Highland Park Hospital.

Snowfall Stirs Moscow Winter

MOSCOW (UPI) — Parts of Moscow received more than six inches of snow during the past 24 hours in the Soviet capital's first significant snowfall this winter. Snow, accompanied by subfreezing weather, sent the temperature plunging to 18 degrees, ending what Tass News Agency said was Moscow's warmest winter in 23 years.

Saskatchewan

Dental Health Gap 'Appalling'

REGINA (CP) — The extent of the dental health problem amongst Saskatchewan children is appalling, health minister Walter Smishek said while releasing a report on proposals for a free dental program for children aged three to 12.

Smishek said Monday the most recent evidence of the situation is contained in a 1971 dental survey of several Saskatchewan school units which "revealed some rather startling statistics."

The report showed that 76 per cent of children at age seven surveyed, still required fillings and 39 per cent required extractions. At age 11, 75 per cent required fillings and 26 per cent required extractions. By age 11, 40 per cent exhibited some degree of gum disease.

Smishek said there is an insufficient number of practising dentists in the province to provide all services needed and those dentists who are available tend to concentrate in larger centres.

"In view of this unmet need, the government has committed itself to the implementation of a dental program for children in Saskatchewan."

The program, estimated to cost between $4 and $5 million a year when fully implemented, will provide a wide range of services. These include preventive services, dental health education, fillings, treatment of gum disease and extractions when necessary.

The program would be implemented in stages beginning in September, 1974, by age groups. Coverage likely will be provided to all six-year-olds in the first year, five to seven in the second year, three to eight in the third year, and adding ages nine to 10 in the fourth year and 11 to 12 in the fifth year.

A combination of permanent clinics, temporary clinics, organized transportation systems and mobile clinics to work closely with the school system, are proposed.

Those delivering the service, expected to number more than 350 when the program is in full operation by 1979, would include dentists, dental nurses and certified dental assistants. A university program has been established to train dental nurses who would be qualified to perform a great many services now provided by dentists.

Too Tired For Sex

LONDON (Reuter) — Workers at a London bakery are threatening to go on strike because they say long shiftwork is leaving them too tired to make love to their wives.

About 80 drivers were locked out of the bakery Monday for refusing to work 14-hour weekend shifts. They want the shift cut by an hour.

"Sex is the last thing you think about after a shift like that," said one of the men.

Ballet Honor Guest

When Victoria Symphony presents Royal Winnipeg Ballet Sunday at Royal Theatre, major production will be company's widely acclaimed ballet, The Ecstasy of Rita Joe, story in dance of native Canadian girl in big city. As special guest of honor for Sunday's ballet, symphony society has invited Ardyth Cooper, seen here with conductor Laszlo Gati, centre, and president John Di Castri. Ardyth, native Canadian herself, was runnerup to Gillian Regehr when current Miss Canada became Miss Victoria last May. And that's not Chopsticks being played on organ at society headquarters.

Aspiring Actors, Actresses

Clinic Stress: Imagination

The baker's dozen of bodies lay, completely relaxed, on the stage. Their owners, male and female, took five long, deep breaths.

"Now," said the voice from out front, "don't move, but imagine yourselves some other creature — animal, bird, reptile, or from the water. Concentrate. THINK yourself that creature."

Another long pause, quiet and stillness.

"All right," came the voice, "now start moving, as that creature would move. Not as yourself. As that creature."

Slowly, assorted motion developed onstage. Soon it became evident there were at least two birds, several four-footed animals, a snake, and others less obvious.

"Now," the voice came again, "keeping that creature in mind, vocalize as it would."

This proved a definite challenge to the "snake" and to one other who had chosen to be a tortoise but soon could be heard birdcalls, the meowing of contented or annoyed cats, the barking of dogs.

All of this was just the start of a theatre workshop conducted by Ken Dyba of Calgary at Victoria Theatre Guild's Langham Court under sponsorship of Theatre Canada — the former Dominion Drama Festival.

Not all of those attending were onstage. These were the participants interested primarily in acting. Others aimed at directing, at stage management, at theatre design, at lighting and the score or so other theatre involvements.

Dyba
. . . out front

Mrs. Smith
. . . funds available

Dyba, the voice out front, was underlining the vast importance of total immersion in character — the need to "be" the character one was playing onstage.

To this end took the group several steps further.

From moving and vocalizing as creatures, he had them adapt the movements and utterances of those creatures to a specific human. Each must create that human — name, sex, age, background—totally in mind, remembering to give him or her some recognizable traits of the creature.

Given time to absorb the new character, Dyba suddenly informed them they were all in prison. They were assigned numbers, told to figure out why that character would be in a cell, given a little time, then called up to be quizzed sharply on their presence in prison.

It was a fascinating exercise, enjoyed by the participants.

And it was just the beginning of the workshops, which will carry on into February.

Most, but not all, of those present were Theatre Guild members, but Helen Smith of the guild, who is also president of Theatre Canada, pointed out that funds for such workshops were available to any theatre group which could offer a good program.

In this case, Dyba is also in Victoria from Calgary to direct the guild's next production, the Canadian play Leaving Home by David French. This play was introduced in Eastern Canada last fall and played with great success to audiences in both Toronto and Montreal.

It tells of a family from Newfoundland moved to Toronto, and of the emotional conflicts that ultimately tear it apart. It is so skilfully written, say eastern reviewers, that it appears as if a wall had been removed from your neighbor's house, and you can see and hear its times of fun, of love, of turmoil, of bitter strife.

In the Victoria cast, to be seen starting Jan. 26 at Langham Court, will be John Krich, Clara Hare, Paddy Moore, Dougal Naismith, Josephine Seale, Rosalind Scott and Brian Lenton.

Scenes from Leaving Home will also be worked up by members of the workshop under Dyba's direction, while others develop for workshop presentation another Canadian offering, Swordplay, by Victorian Leon Rooke.

For Leaving Home, by the way, both cast and workshop people are learning a Newfoundland accent, which is proving great fun.

David French should know whereof he speaks in his play, for he is himself a Newfoundlander now living in Toronto. He came to CBC as an actor in 1960, wrote a number of television and radio scripts and his first stage play in Prince Edward Island almost three years ago.

Music Lovers Don't Rush Bar

CALGARY (CP)— Bar service was started at the Jubilee Auditorium for the first time Sunday but auditorium manager Claude Blackwood said business was slow.

The audience was mostly older people and family groups attending the regular concert of the Calgary Philharmonic orchestra and Blackwood said they were not expected to do much drinking.

The service was approved last summer by the provincial government and is also scheduled to begin at the Jubilee Auditorium in Edmonton.

Blackwood said the decision to sell alcoholic drinks at any particular performance is at the discretion of management and the show's sponsors.

Famed Mime To Teach

OTTAWA (CP) — Marcel Marceau, whose pantomime world is one of silence, spoke volubly Monday about his art and his plans to launch a new Paris-based mine company.

Here for the opening tonight of a six-month tour of Canada and the U.S., the creator of the tragi-comic underdog clown Bip talked for nearly an hour, holding a small audience enthralled, offstage and out of costume.

It was billed as a news conference, but there were many Marceau devotees there too, applauding his performance twice.

He plans to reopen a mime school and form a touring company of 12 to 15, which will play four months of the year in Paris, and go on tour for six months a year. It will come to North America in 1975, he said.

"In 1969, I started my international mime school in Paris, which lasted two years without subsidy. It was my personal money. I had to carry all the professors, the whole school for two years, with 80 students coming from the whole world, and because I was touring, it was very difficult.

"In 1974 there will be a mime school again, and I will have a mime company. The school is important. It's the only way mime survives. If you want an art to survive, you have to have a school. The ballet is very strong today because there are many strong ballet schools."

Marceau, who will be 50 this year, revived the ancient art of mime in the theatre almost single-handedly. He spoke of its origins in Greek theatre, and its survival through the middle ages on the steps and in the forecourts of great European cathedrals.

Actor Caine Weds

LAS VEGAS (AP) — British actor Michael Caine and former beauty queen Shakira Baksh were married here Monday night.

Caine used his real name of Maurice Joseph Micklewhite moments before the marriage to obtain a licence.

It is the second marriage for the 39-year-old actor and the first for Miss Baksh, 25, expecting a child by Caine in July.

Caine said previously he and Miss Baksh would be married as soon as he could find time between films and trips to promote them.

Both gave their home addresses as Windsor, England.

PONTIAC Astre

A NEW SMALL ECONOMY CAR MAKES THE SCENE

GM Canada

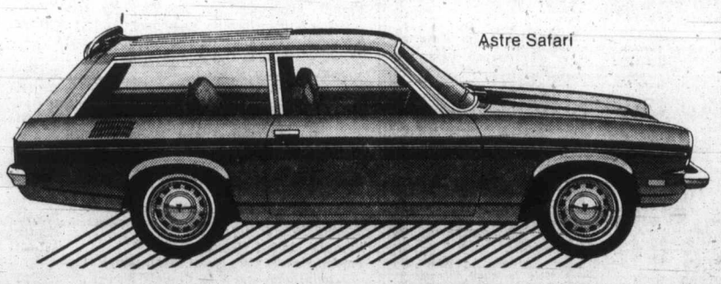
IT'S RIGHT ON

Astre enters the small car arena with the kind of credentials that'll make some other little cars wish they'd never gotten off the boat. Astre is economical to run and economical to buy. In fact, you can pay less for an Astre than many people are already paying for small cars—and their cars aren't Pontiacs!

Astre is a little car yet its front headroom and front legroom compare well with many big cars. Its performance is very lively, thanks in a big way to a 2300 c.c. overhead-cam, aluminum-alloy engine that's a real standout among its competitors. And as you would expect, you can leave it to Pontiac to lay on the nice touches.

Full-foam seats, rich-looking materials, and a powered ventilation system that keeps outside air moving through Astre even when it's stationary and with the windows up. You've got four model choices. An Astre Coupe that's our lowest-priced Pontiac, an Astre Hatchback that's half coupe and half wagon, an Astre Safari that's a little Pontiac station wagon, and an Astre Panel that's a little delivery van. So now you can save money on a small car that has all the features you want along with the prestige of a Pontiac. Come in and price an Astre soon. It's right on! And it's built in Canada.

Astre Hatchback



Astre Safari

RIGHT ON WITH A PROVEN DESIGN

Every major component has been thoroughly tested and proven over many millions of miles. Most importantly, Astre's aluminum-alloy, overhead-cam engine packs plenty of expressway punch with four-cylinder, import-style economy. It's lightweight to help give a good power-to-weight ratio, it's simple for quick maintenance and it's efficient, easy on gas. At 2300 cubic centimetres (or 140 cubic inches) Astre's engine is one of the biggest in its class—no need to worry about it overworking over the long haul. To smooth out the ride, Astre has full-coil suspension. An electric fuel pump shuts off automatically should oil pressure ever drop below normal.

RIGHT ON WITH REASSURANCE

Astre has a double-panel acoustic roof and the reassurance of Side-guard door beams as part of a comprehensive safety package. The Coupe even has a Cargo-guard steel bulkhead in the trunk.

Buckle up for safety.

RIGHT ON WITH IMPORT-STYLE ECONOMY

You expect good gas mileage in an economy car and Astre delivers. Also keeping down the cost of upkeep are flush and dry rocker panels that help reduce damage from road salts, a side-terminal battery that's corrosion proof and an engine air filter that should last 50,000 miles or more. Astre is economical to run. And it's built for the "do it yourself" buff. As a little car that's easy to work on, Astre is right on.

Astre Hatchback

RIGHT ON WITH TYPICAL PONTIAC LUXURY AND COMFORT

A small economy car that's a Pontiac should be a cut above. Astre is. It has contoured full-foam seats in exclusive knit vinyl in a choice of four colors, depending on model. Or you can order at extra cost cloth-and-vinyl in either of two smart checks (with a matching panel on the door) or Custom-vinyl in your choice of three colors. In every Astre you get simulated walnut panelling on the dash, carpeting fore and aft, (except, of course, in the Panel van), a closeable glove box and wide-opening doors. Pontiac Astre is some economy car! If you want to add extra-cost options, you can order a radio, Turbo Hydra-matic transmission, radial tires, and air conditioning.

RIGHT ON WITH A DOWN-TO-EARTH PRICE

Astre's price is nose to nose with many of the most popular imports. And included in the price you get standard goodies like front disc brakes, a map pocket in the door, a powered ventilation system, a cooling system that should never overheat, a choice of 10 Magic-Mirror exterior colors—and service at any Pontiac dealer in Canada.

RIGHT ON WITH AN EXCITING GT OPTION

Order it on the Hatchback or Safari and you get a special high-performance engine, front and rear stabilizer bars, wide-rim GT wheels, a small diameter GT steering wheel, full sports car instrumentation including a tachometer and a blacked-out grille. Even more. You can add stripes with or without the GT package. Try out an Astre today... where Astres are sold...at your Pontiac dealer's.

TINGLEY—Brydone Lorne (Bert) of Victoria on January 8, 1973. Private family service. Cremation. Flowers gratefully declined. Arrangements through the Memorial Society of B.C. and First Memorial Services Ltd.

The Lord is my shepherd: I shall not want.
He maketh me to lie down in green pastures: He leadeth me beside the still waters.
He restoreth my soul: He leadeth me in the paths of righteousness for His name's sake.
Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil: for thou art with me; thy rod and thy staff they comfort me.
Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies; thou anointest my head with oil; my cup runneth over.
Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life: and I will dwell in the house of the Lord for ever.
PSALM 23.

8 CARDS OF THANKS

The gratitude in our hearts can never be fully expressed, but we want our relatives, friends and neighbors to know how much their kind words and expressions of sympathy have meant to us during our time of sorrow in the sad loss of our loving Husband, Father and Grandfather, Orval C. Robertson "Robbie." Special thanks to Chaplain W. J. Bingham "Naden". Also the Colwood Detachment of Commissionaires and Pallbearers; also the Corp. of Commissionaires, Victoria, and the Dining hall staff at Nelles Block; Naden. Dr. Ronald R. Forgie and Dr. Neil R. Stewart and soloist Jack Dunbar. — Mrs. Marjorie P. Robertson and daughter and son-in-law, Cpl. and Mrs. J. E. O'Brien "Diana", St. John's, Nfld.; grandsons, Michael, Sean, "Wee Robbie."

We wish to express our sincere thanks and appreciation to our friends and neighbors during our recent bereavement. Special thanks to the nurses of the Coronary Ward of Victoria General and Reverend J. Titus.—Mrs. Pimlott and family.

9 IN MEMORIAM

CALVERT — In loving memory of our dear mother, Beatrice Elizabeth, who passed away January 10, 1972.
One year has passed since that sad day.
When one we loved was called away.
God took her home, it was his will.
Within our hearts, she liveth still.
—Sadly missed but not forgotten by her daughter, Lillian, son-in-law George and grandson Brent.

CALVERT — In loving memory of our dear mother and grandmother, Beatrice Elizabeth, who passed away January 10th, 1972.
Dear Mother, you are not forgotten.
Though on earth you are no more,
Still in memory you are with us
As you always were before.
—So sadly missed by her daughter and son-in-law Nita and Bill, and granddaughter Kim.

CALVERT — In loving memory of Beatrice (Bee) Calvert who passed away January 10th, 1972.
And while she lies in peaceful sleep
Her memory we shall always keep.
—Always remembered by her sisters Daisy and Mabel, brother-in-law Mannie and nieces.

REID — In loving memory of John Lindsay Reid, who passed away January 10th, 1971.
—Sadly missed and remembered always by his daughters Edith and Gladys.

Bruce Lowther

Rowan and Martin, who have given Fickle Finger of Fate awards to everyone from the Pentagon to Ordinary Joes for bad-taste ploys, will give one to themselves on their last show of the season March 12.

The reason is their running joke about Cleveland, Ohio, a town they've been knocking for years. Cleveland hasn't liked it but there was no protest until a Laugh-In show with Jack Klugman demeaned the Cleveland Symphony, one of the best in the world.

An avalanche of protest letters caused Laugh-In producer Paul Keyes to order a halt to Cleveland jokes, plus the FFF award. However, he added any Cleveland jokes already in filmed shows won't be deleted — too expensive.

BUREAU OF USELESS INFORMATION: Tuesday's answer — Warner Baxter did win a best-acting Oscar, despite what you old fuddy-duddies thought, as the Cisco Kid in the film In Old Arizona. He also costarred later on with Ingrid Bergman and Susan Hayward in Adam Had Four Sons and he died too soon.

Today's question — Marie Dressler, a beautiful person, won an Oscar in 1930-31 for her role in Min and Bill; you tell me who played Bill. Also identify the man who won a 1960 Oscar for Elmer Gantry and, for experts, the pop singer who was in Gantry's flock. Answers Thursday.

C-9:30 — A must for contemporary balletomanes is a five-work CBC special showing the Toronto Dance Theatre in England — 2, 6.

C-9:30 — The Wild Bunch: how moviemakers disrupt a town — 9.

C-9:30 — All in the Family reruns Archie's job pains — 12.

CABLE 10 — 7:00 p.m., Chroniques de France; 7:30, Virginia Adrian and Island Hobbyist; 8:00, Canada at War; 8:30, British films; 9:00, Walter Donald and Contract 1; 9:30, You and the law: homeowner tips.

Wednesday Movies

9:30 a.m. — Zero Hour (routine, tedious 1957 pilot drama), Dana Andrews, Sterling Hayden. Somebody said recently this column hasn't been funny lately and I replied, "What do you want? Henny Youngman?"—4.

12:00 noon — Hired Wife (1940 romanticomedy), Rosalind Russell, Brian Aherne, Virginia Bruce. They don't make these any more, thankfully — 13.

12:45 — The Best Man (1964 presidential - convention drama, today's third best film, Henry Fonda, Cliff Robertson. The late Lee Tracy contributes a superb job as a Harry Truman type — 6, 8.

C-3:30 p.m. — Grand Slam (so-so 1968 heist suspense), Edward G. Robinson, Janet Leigh. Speaking of Henny Youngman, when he goes to heaven, he plans to tell Saint Peter, "Take my wife. Please."—5.

4:00 — Torpedo Bay (1963 war action, not too bad), James Mason — 7.

C-7:00 — Man from Laramie (good 1955 western), James Stewart, Arthur Kennedy. Two fine actors show how a routine story can sparkle — 13.

C-8:00 — Marooned (1969 astronauts drama), Gregory Peck, Richard Crenna, James Franciscus, Gene Hackman, David Janssen. Today's second best—8.

C-8:30 — Trouble Comes to Town (new interracial drama), Thomas Evans, Lloyd Bridges, many more. Also not to bad — 4.

11:00 — Roadhouse (low-camp 1948 nasties), Richard Widmark, Ida Lupino, Cornel Wilde. Serious when made but not even funny today — 13.

11:30 — Darby's Rangers (1958 James Garner wins the war). Based on fact but not very solidly — 7, 12.

11:50 — Double Dynamite (1951 sailors comedy, one of history's worst films), Sinatra, Groucho Marx, Jane Russell. Speaking of Henny Youngman, it was so hot I saw a cat walking his dog — 2.

● 12:00 — The Big Knife (1955 Odets slash at Hollywood, still great), Jack Palance, Rod Steiger, Ida Lupino, Wendell Corey ,many more. See it — 6, 8.

12:55 a.m. — Up Front (stupid 1951 war is fun), Tom Ewell, David Wayne. Does anybody still want Henny Youngman? If not, take my jokes. Please — 13.

Wednesday Radio

8:00 p.m. — Concern gets up to date on capital punishment — CBU (690).

8:30 — Western Canada Hockey, Edmonton at Victoria — CJVI (900).

Provincial COURT

Judge William Ostler took a chance by giving one Tuesday in Victoria Provincial Court.

The case involved Timothy Andrew Pelton, 22, of 1323 Sussex, who pleaded guilty Dec. 22 to two charges of break-in and theft the day before, when one color TV set was stolen from each of Television Service Centre, 1014 Cook in Victoria, and B. and N. Electronics, 2041 Oak Bay in Oak Bay.

Ostler said Pelton had a good work record but had overdone use of acohol and fallen in with bad companions. He agreed with a presentence report's statement that the crimes merited a jail term and probation but added:

"This time I'm going to eliminate the jail term (and) give you a chance. I don't like sending anyone to jail the first time . . . but sometimes it has to be done. I'm going to take a chance."

He ordered a suspended sentence and a two-year probationary term.

□

It was a different matter with Franklin Duane Capostinsky, also 22 and of 1323 Sussex, who had pleaded guilty with Pelton Dec. 22 to the same break-ins and later to one in Kamloops.

Ostler said "I'm afraid your future is a very grim one indeed" unless Capostinsky also restrains his use of alcohol and changes a life that has provided a sizeable criminal record.

The judge also said that, while he was not criticizing other courts, "extreme leniency you have received in the past has perhaps misled you into thinking" stiffer sentences would not be imposed.

Capostinsky was sentenced to six months in jail to be followed by an 18-month probationary term.

Two persons received suspended sentences and terms of probation following pleas of guilty to separate charges of possession of hashish.

Probation will run nine months for Brian Kirk Higgins, 25, of 2100 Fernwood, checked Dec. 1 by police in his residence, and six months for Greg Danbrook, 17, of 1010 Fairfield, stopped Nov. 7 by police in the Bastion Square area.

Small amounts of hashish were involved in both cases.

A one-year probationary term and a suspended sentence were the penalty for Douglas Edgar Flynn, 19, 734 Lampson, who pleaded guilty Dec. 20 to an Esquimalt charge of break-in and theft. It resulted from the theft the day before of almost $53 worth of liquor, cigarettes and cash from the Bacchanalia Dining Lounge, 905 Esquimalt.

□

In the court section of Judge Harold Alder, a one-month jail term was levied against Reginald Miles Hewko, 19, of 24 Chancellor, who pleaded guilty to a Victoria charge of theft involving less than $200.

The charge grew out of the shoplifting of a $12 pair of women's slacks last Saturday from The Bay. The term will run at the same time as a three-month sentence Hewko received Monday from Ostler for attempting to utter a stolen $166 Unemployment Insurance cheque Aug. 25 in the Safeway store at 3400 Tillicum.

On that charge, Hewko had been found guilty Dec. 19 following a trial.

□

Alexander Leonard Jacob, 23, of 3745 Tillicum, was fined $250 after he was found guilty by Alder following a trial on a Victoria charge of assault causing bodily harm. The assault was on another young man, who suffered a fractured jaw Sept. 28 when hit by a piece of wood in a dispute outside the Army and Navy club at 1001 Wharf.

Plant Care

From time to time over the last couple of weeks I have been reviewing the proper care of various Christmas gift potted plants. In this connection, I should point out that two popular gift plants are so closely related, they both require the same culture. These are the Christmas Pepper and the Jerusalem Cherry.

How the Jerusalem Cherry ever acquired this name, I haven't the foggiest idea, for it isn't from Jerusalem — its native home is Madeira — and it isn't even remotely related to the cherry. In fact, its decorative little berries are said to be poisonous; this may or may not be true, for the authorities don't agree on this point, and I, for one, haven't the slightest desire to do any testing.

The little pointed red peppers are not poisonous — they are actually edible tobasco peppers — but they are hotter than the hinges of Hell and can blister a tongue unaccustomed to their fiery bite.

The Jerusalem Cherry is actually tiny shrub and is first cousin to the tomato, the pepper, the potato and the eggplant, all respected members of the Solanum family. The black sheep of the trube is Solanum nigrum, the Deadly Nightshade, a highly poisonous weed, and it is probably because of this relationship that the berries of the Jerusalem Cherry are suspect.

If either of these colorful little plants has come to live at your house, a good place for it through the winter months is a sunny window in a coolish room, ideally around 60 degrees. A spot well removed from steam radiators or hot air registers is essential, for direct heat will cause the berries and leaves to fall off.

Another common cause of leaf-dropping and berry-dropping is air pollution, for like all members of the Solanum family, the Jerusalem Cherry is abnormally sensitve to traces of gas or oil fumes in the air. I have known a plant to lose all its berries and most of its leaves overnight when the pilot light on a gas range was blown out inadvertently, releasing just a trace of gas to the atmosphere.

Unlike the azalea, this little plant will tolerate ordinary tap water and will probably need watering about every second day through its period of active growth. A little houseplant fertilizer may be given in its water every second week.

Like apples, the berries will fall when fully mature, and the dropping of the ripe berries signals the approach of the plant's annual resting period. At this stage, give no more fertilizer and reduce watering until the soil is almost but not quite bone dry.

A little pruning and shaping is in order about the time the plant is put on reduced water rations, otherwise it will become too big and straggly. A good plan is to shorten all branches by about half their length.

In late spring your plant should be given a summer holiday outdoors, either on a lightly shaded porch or by sinking the pot up to its rim in the outdoor garden, morning sun only. You may step up the amount and frequency of watering at this stage, and when new leaves appear, resume feeding with a fertilizer solution. If the leaves should turn abnormally pale, try adding a tiny pinch of Epsom salts to its water until the good green color returns. This plant seems to need a little extra magnesium in its diet.

To get berries on your plant again, the little white blossoms must be pollinated. Insects will normally take care of this while the plant is outdoors; indoors, a good method is to tickle the centre of each blossom in turn with a Q-Tip. This will transfer pollen from one blossom to another, and berries or peppers should start to form soon after.

Both the Jerusalem Cherry and and the Christmas Pepper are easy plants to propagate, either by removing and sowing seeds from ripe fruits or by taking and rooting slips. Is the case of the pepper, after breaking open a pod and removing the seeds, wash your hands IMMEDIATELY, for if you were to rub your eyes with fingers contaminated with red pepper dust, they would become inflamed and very painful.

Peace Through Joy

"Here are the photographs of the damage, Mr. President. As you can see, the entire city's in ruins."

"Thank you. Good heavens, let me say that this is the worse disaster I have witnessed since election day, 1962. Get me the state department on the phone."

"The state department?"

"Yes, we must do everything possible to show the world that in the event of a catastrophe of this nature anyone may count on America's deep humanitarianism, generosity and friendship."

"Yes, sir, but . . ."

"No buts. I want every available plane loaded with food, clothing, blankets and medical supplies. I suppose they're without lights or power?"

"Yes, sir, the power station was knocked out, but . . ."

"Send them generators, water tankers, technicians. And to cheer them up, you better send Bob Hope too."

"To Hanoi, sir?"

"Hanoi?"

"That's an aerial photograph of Hanoi, sir."

"Damn it. I thought it was Managua, Nicaragua."

★ ★ ★

"I'm sorry, sir. It should have been labelled more clearly. A whole batch of aerial photographs came in this morning. Now this one . . ."

"Let me see that. Hah! Just as I thought. Look at that. There's a building still clearly standing. Get me the air force on the phone."

"The air force, sir?"

"I want that building hit with everything we've got. I don't care how many B-52s we lose in these most massive air raids in history. We must show the world America's firm and unyielding commitment to peace by bombing these recalcitrant North Vietnamese to the conference table. Again."

"But, sir . . ."

"No buts. Look at that photographic evidence of the destruction I can wreak when my wrath is roused!"

"Yes, sir, but that's the Nicaraguan earthquake."

"Good heavens! I wonder what they did to anger Him? In any event, carry out these two missions in the name of friendship and peace and report back tomorrow."

"Yes, sir."

★ ★ ★

"Excuse me, sir. But you asked me to report back on those two missions you ordered yesterday to Managua and Hanoi."

"Well, what are the results?"

"Good news, sir. Hanoi's agreed to your peace terms."

"I knew it! They just couldn't stand up any longer to my massive bombing attacks, eh?"

"Not exactly, sir. There seems to have been a slight mix-up. But Hanoi says that in gratitude for your sending them food, clothing, blankets and Bob Hope, they are laying down their arms forever."

"Look, not a word of this little error. Peace is peace. At last we've achieved it . . . Wait a minute, are we at war with Nicaragua?"

"No, sir. They want to thank us for sending 100 B-52s to assist them in their demolition efforts. In gratitude, they pledge their undying friendship."

"All right. But henceforth, I want these photographs carefully separated and clearly indexed."

"Yes, sir. And how should I file them?"

"Under 'Catastrophes,' of course. But label one, 'Peace,' and the other, 'Friendship'."

HOLLYWOOD — Warners tossed a $15-a-head luncheon to launch the shooting of Mame and it came off like a meeting of honor graduates of a Dale Carnegie course. Most everybody a Hollywood trade paper said had left the show sat on the dais with Lucille Ball, who will play the title role. The trade story of a few weeks back said that Bea ("Maude") Arthur, to name one, had walked out because of differences with Lucy over how Bea would do her role of the boozy actress friend of Mame. Bea, who is TV's comedy sensation this year, created the role on Broadway with Angela Lansbury and her husband Gene Saks is directing the movie. At the luncheon Lucy said Bea was her one and only choice and commented: "We were afraid we might lose her because of the strike at CBS, but happily we didn't." Meanwhile, Lucy and husband Gary Morton, her executive producer of her TV show, both said they were going ahead with their threatened lawsuit against the trade paper.

A letter from Mrs. Albert Perhab, whose husband is an executive with Pepsi Cola. She referred to a recent item about a movie to be made in Ceylon with Gloria Swanson, Joan Crawford and Alec Guinness. The Perhabs were recently in Ceylon with Joan who gave them more details on the movie. It's based on a Somerset Maugham short story called The Silence of Heaven and was originally based in Singapore. But the Singapore of 45 years ago and the Singapore of today are vastly different, so that explains the Ceylon locale. It's the story of two women who hire a young man who plays each against the other romantically. No, Guinness does not play the younger man. He's not cast yet. Joan is still one of the most popular stars in Asia.

There's a Filipino singer-pianist who is the toast of Bangkok's famous Patpong Street and if you are a Nat (King) Cole fan, he'll give you goosebumps. He speaks not one word of English but when he sings he is Nat to perfection. His repertoire consists of all the Cole hits — Mona Lisa, Rambling Rose and Unforgettable, to name a few. Learned them all from listening his idol's records. Frank Liberman, who used to be Nat's press agent, kept brushing away a tear, the guy was so realistic.

Bad Begets Good

It would be a simple world if good came out of good, and bad came out of bad, and we could easily distinguish between the two. But motives and results, causes and consequences, are so tangled in our mortal skein that hardly anyone can know what will end in what.

I thought of this the other morning, when I had to bring something over to my children's school, and observed some of the kids playing chess in the lounge.

★ ★ ★

I asked about it at dinner that night, and my older son reported that "three times as many students are playing chess now as before, and they play about three times as often."

He attributed the phenomenal rise, as we all must, to the Fischer-Spassky match in Iceland last summer.

For a while there, hotcakes were lagging behind chess-sets in sales, and the momentum generated by publicity in that match has impelled tens of thousands of new players to the board.

★ ★ ★

This is a wonderful and positive consequence — of what? Of Bobby Fischer's bad behavior, of his recalcitrance, his stubbornness, his imperiousness, his downright rudeness to his hosts, his sponsors, and his opponent.

Whatever else he might be, one would hesitate to describe Fischer as a gentleman.

A gentleman would have trotted off to Iceland quietly and co-operatively; would have about money, lights, noise, or playing conditions; would have won or lost graciously, and returned home.

But then chess would have remained in the comparative obscurity in which it has rested for a century.

There would have been no headlines, no radio and TV bulletins, no intense or widespread public interest, no sporting atmosphere of championship dimensions. Fischer did immense good for chess by acting badly.

★ ★ ★

Indeed, no one in our time has done more to bring this noble game to public attention, to make it respected (since we obviously respect only those games which dangle vast sums before its participants), to inspire youngsters to pore over the chessboard as zealously as they bounce a basketball or swing a bat.

★ ★ ★

Who ever imagined, a year ago, that the evening news would begin with a chess bulletin from — where? — Reykjavik. (Why, I even had to look it up to spell it properly.)

Or that a picture of two men sitting on their butts for five hours without moving would occupy the front pages of the daily papers?

Unwittingly, Bobby's boorishness — if it was that — has given chess its biggest impetus of our time. This is no argument for bad manners, but it does confound the smug and simple maxims of the virtuous.

Assessment Value Up $9 Million

Saanich's taxable assessment for 1973 totalled $188.4 million, an increase of nearly $9 million over the 1972 values, Mayor Hugh Curtis announced Monday in council.

Curtis said there was a general reduction in the assessed value of improvements and an increase in the assessed value of land in the areas which were reassessed during 1972.

"Thus the total increase in assessed value of improvements was due to new construction which has taken place since the completion of the last assessment roll," Curtis said.

The increase in land assessments was 1.7 million and that for improvements totalled $7.3 million. The increase in land assessments due to reassessment amounted to just over $1 million and the remainder was due to the increased value of land because of subdivision.

Curtis attacked those taxpayers "unable to see the direct relationship between market value and the assessment placed on his or her land and improvenents."

He said: "It remains a source of amazement to me that those who complain most often about assessment increases and resultant jumps are entirely satisfied to sell the property which has been the source of the complaint at a significantly increased price."

This year Saanich residents received assessment notices which resembled utility bills. Curtis explained that the notices had been redesigned to conform with new electronic processing and bulk mailing equipment which has given appraisal staff "many more days in the field."

Residents, who all should have received their notices within the last few days, have until 5 p.m. Jan. 17 to appeal their assessments.

In Oak Bay, taxable value of property has increased by more than $2½ million from last year's nearly $65 million, most of it coming from assessments on new construction, says assessor Colin Wyatt.

He said the taxable value of land in the municipality has increased by $225,000 from $20,336,320 last year, while the taxable value of improvements has increased by $2,372,660 from last year's $44,640,560.

Few properties had increased over 10 per cent, he said, and there was no automatic percentage increase this year.

Wyatt said about $750,000 of the total increase came from reassessments of existing properties, the remainder coming from assessments of new homes.

Last year some 56,000 assessment notices were sent out, while this year about 59,000 notices were mailed.

The court of revision will sit in Oak Bay starting at 10 a.m. Feb. 9, for those who object to their assessment, Wyatt said. Notice of appeal,, however, must be filed no later than Jan. 17 if hearing is to be granted.

Victoria's assessment totals have not yet been compiled.

Blimp-like craft, described as world's first hot-air airship rises from field near Newbury, England, on public maiden flight Sunday. It measures 100 by 60 feet when inflated but can be folded to fit in car trailer. It sports air-inflated rudder and Volkswagen engine which powers five-foot propeller. Builders, Cameron Balloons of Bristol and Littlemore Engineering of Oxford, predict big exports of craft, said to cost little to fly.

Anderson Urges B.C. Job Action

'Get Off Butt'

● B.C. Jobless climb to 7.6 per cent. Page 3

Premier Barrett was advised Tuesday to "get up off his butt" and do something about B.C.'s worsening unemployment problem.

The unsolicited advice came from B.C. Liberal leader David Anderson.

Acutally, disclosure that the province's unemployment figure for 1972 had risen to 7.6 per cent from 7.1 per cent for the previous year brought a general shifting of blame.

Barrett said a great deal of the responsibility lay with the ferederal government. Both Anderson and Social Credit house leader Frank Richter put the blame squarely at Barrett's doorstep. Conservative house leader Scott Wallace said the fault lay in a number of areas.

After hearing of Barrett's stand, Anderson said: "He still thinks, now that he's premier, that he can get away with careless and inaccurate statements and buck-passing. It's about time he got up off his butt and did something."

During an interview Barrett said the unemployment figures appeared to reflect a general drift in the Canadian economy. But he was also critical of the federal government's failure to distribute federal money until a late date for winter works programs.

"Had we received those funds earlier, the figure wouldn't have been as bad as it is," he said.

While expressing disappointment over the situation, he said he was hopeful Prime Minister Trudeau would "act quickly" on proposals Barrett said he made during his meeting in Ottawa with Trudeau last month. He did not say what the proposals were.

He said he was certain the unemployment figures would be reduced if Trudeau did take the recommended action.

"We're in need of aggressive leadership from Ottawa and I hope we will get that now that the House is back together."

In a prepared statement Richter said the unemployment picture was "in line with NDP policy which he said had scared business and discouraged investment. He also said that distribution of the money to municipalities to create work had been further delayed by the provincial government's decision to set up a cabinet committee for study.

"Under the previous government, one person in the department of municipal affairs did all the work, and very quickly," Richter said.

Miniplanes Skyjacked

CANNOCK, England (Reuter) — A group of radio control model-aircraft enthusiasts has run up against the crime of the 1970s-hijackin.

Several radio-controlled planes costing up to $320 each have disappeared mysteriously during flights.

The enthusiasts believe that the hijacker has a radio device which can divert the planes.

Early Budget Aims at Jobs

CP, UPI

OTTAWA — Prime Minister Trudeau said Tuesday an early budget would be introduced with measures to alleviate unemployment in Canada which rose to 6.8 per cent in December.

Answering questions in the House of Commons, Trudeau said the government already had taken measures to pump $375 million into winter job creation this year.

He said other aid would come in "the budget speech which we expect will be fairly soon which will announce a whole series of measures in respect of the economy and to reduce unemployment."

Tuesday, the Liberal minority government won its first vote of the 29th parliament, defeating a Conservative motion to postpone the throne speech debate and get on with other business.

The vote was 154 to 104, with only Conservative party members supporting the motion moved by veteran Tory George Hees.

New Democratic and Social Credit party members supported the Liberals to defeat the motion.

Turner
. . . 'unexpected reversals'

Statistics Canada reported Tuesday the seasonally adjusted unemployment rate rose from 6.6 per cent in November to 6.8 per cent in December, leaving 548,000 Canadian unemployed in a labor force of 8.9 million.

Finance Minister John Turner, speaking in debate Tuesday afternoon, gave no new indication of the tax plans or other economic measures which would be contained in his budget.

He said it would contain "new fiscal and other measures to deal with our most pressing economic and social problem, our most pressing human problem — the creation of jobs in Canada."

The minister blamed the high December unemployment on unexpected economic reversals in the October-December quarter. "But the pause was only temporary," he said, noting the large number of strikes during the period.

Turner said he would not make any predictions now for the economic growth in 1973. But, he quoted a forecast by the Organization for Economic Co-operation and Development that Canada would have higher growth than any industrialized country except Japan. He said also the University of Toronto economic forecasting unit had predicted a growth rate of 7½ per cent in the year.

"No doubt there are problems, among which is the fact that the rate of unemployment is higher than it ought to be," Turner conceded. "The pace of growth in Canada for several years has ex-

PARIS — President Georges Pompidou charged Tuesday that the leaders of three governments, including Golda Meir of Israel, will be intruding in French internal politics by attending an international Socialist conference this weekend in Paris. He said French officials will have nothing to do with them.

Others scheduled to attend the congress of the Socialist International include Premier Olof Palme of Sweden and Chancellor Bruno Kreisky of Austria.

The three Socialist leaders were invited by Francois Mitenrand, secretary-general of the French Socialist party.

When asked at his semi-annual news conference what his attitude toward the participants would be, Pompidou tartly replied that this was not the right time for such a meeting, as French National Assembly elections are coming up March 4 and March 11.

Dock Pact Expected By Today

VANCOUVER (CP) — A settlement in the B.C. dock dispute "should be very close," Ed Strang, president of the B.C. Maritime Employers Association, said Tuesday.

Strang said all three outstanding problems had been discussed in a meeting Tuesday between the employers' group and the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union, and added: "I thought we might have had a settlement today."

But he said the union advised him they wanted to meet to discuss the matter and he is to contact union officials today.

The three contentious items which were holding up a settlement are updating the guaranteed job opportunity clause, retroactive pay and amending the wording of the master contract.

The union wants the 1969 guaranteed work clause updated to include members who have joined the union since that date. The dockers also want retroactive pay paid to non-union casual workers.

B.C.'s 3,200 longshoremen went on strike in August, but were ordered back to work by federal legislation which expired Dec. 31.

Blackout Rule May Spur Victoria CBC Station

By BRUCE LOWTHER
Colonist TV Writer

The CBC may set up its own television station in Victoria partly because of a federal rule designed to protect local stations like CHEK, the Colonist learned Tuesday.

There was no official comment from the CBC on strong rumors of a second Victoria TV station but the network did comment on a second set of rumors — about its own AM radio station in Victoria — by saying that won't come at least until 1975 or later.

Sources in the broadcasting industry in several Canadian cities said the CBC has not yet applied to the Canadian Radio-TV Commission in Ottawa for permission to operate a TV channel out of Victoria but the paper work has been started.

The sources said the basic push for a CBC television station in Victoria comes from the fact that this is the only provincial capital in Canada without one — and that goes for radio, too.

But there may have been an extra push due to the CRTC's rule of mid-1972 allowing cable-television systems to black out programs on other channels when the same program is shown on a local channel — provided the local channel asks for the blackout.

B.C. Television, which owns both Victoria's CHEK and Vancouver's CHAN, has frequently asked Victoria Cablevision Ltd. to black out the Seattle ABC station (KMO, Channel 4) when it is showing the episode of Marcus Welby on CHAN (Channel 8) at the same time.

The Victoria cable firm also acceeded to a request for a blackout of Channel 4 when both it and CHEK (Channel 6) were showing Love, American Style. This has not been done in recent weeks.

All that is acceptable to the CBC but the rub may have come with something the Colonist reported last fall — B.C. Television wanted the CBC's Vancouver station, CBUT (Channel 2), blacked out on Victoria Cablevision when it and Channel 6 were showing the same program, which often occurs.

Such a blackout never took place but the request may have been the spur that started the CBC to working seriously on a Victoria station of its own.

Judo Falls Land Him In Medical History

By CLAUDE ADAMS
Colonist Reporter

Nanaimo carpenter Tom Ikeda, a one-time green belt in judo, has won a small place in the medical history books, thanks to his stubbornness.

Ikeda, 33, of 181 Nottingham in Nanaimo, might be the only man in North America forced to give up the sport because of an extremely uncommon shoulder injury, called traumatic osteolysis of the clavicle.

And, as reported by Dr. M. J. Smart of Nanaimo Regional General Hospital in a medical journal the case seems to have caught the attention of radiologists all over the continent. It has a prominent place in the New York-based Radiology News Digest.

It all started in October, 1967, when Ikeda had a bad "break fall" while practising at the Nanaimo Judo Club.

"You're not supposed to land on your shoulder, but I did," he said. He went to see his doctor.

X-rays showed nothing unusual and he was given a drug to relieve the pain. But four months later, he hurt his right shoulder again after a fall. Still the x-rays showed nothing wrong, but the young man was warned to give up judo.

He persisted, however, and in April, 1968, he came in complaining of pain in the left shoulder. X-rays were negative again. Determined to continue in the sport, Ikeda went back to the bruising practices and, sure enough, had pains started in both shoulders.

"The doctor warned me quite a few times to stop, but I didn't. I just kept going back for more cortisone (an antibiotic) shots," he said.

Ikeda took his last bad fall in February, 1970. The x-rays showed that parts of his collarbone were being destroyed. This time the doctor wouldn't take no for an answer.

"It was by this time apparent," writes Smart, "even to the patient, that the continued falls were producing severe changes in his shoulders and he was finally persuaded to give up judo."

Ikeda, who had been working at the sport since the age of 15, says his trainers and instructors never suspected that he had suffered a bad injury.

"As you're learning, you do suffer quite a bit, but you can't go crying to the instructor every time you get a bruise."

All available data shows that Ikeda's is the first case on record where such an injury was directly attributable to judo.

The collarbone is healing now, and Ikeda jokingly says that he may take up karate.

B.C. Profiling Aimed At Prevention

Help Planned for Child-Beaters

By IAN STREET
Colonist Legislature Reporter

The provincial government is preparing a profile of a typical child-beater in an effort to assist professional groups in early diagnosis.

The move is part of a B.C. program, outlined at a conference Tuesday by Health Minister Dennis Cocke and Rehabilitation Minister Norman Levi, keyed to prevention.

The ministers said there were 180 reported cases of battered children in the province during 1971, the last year for which figures are available. In that period there were 12 deaths.

In 1965 there were 70 cases reported.

Cocke said the government is taking a very serious view of the problem. "There are not that many children being abused," the minister told reporters, "but those who are, must be protected. The parents (of these children) are also in a difficult situation.

"Many of the parents are lonely, isolated, typically the subject of abuse in their own childhood and lacking in self-esteem. But a significant finding of recent studies throughout North America is that 90 per cent can be helped. That's why we feel it is so incumbent on professional groups to come forward so we can help these parents."

The health minister said the four main professional groups to be reached are, doctors, nurses, social workers and

Totems Trip Ex-Champions As Hoop Season Underway

Victoria High Totems knocked off the defending champions in one of four games which opened the Victoria High School Boys' Basketball League season Tuesday night.

Totems dumped Belmont Braves, 60-34, at Victoria High School, scoring 20 straight points in the second quarter to break the game open.

John Hampton, who had 27 points to lead the winners, sparked the Totems' surge with 11 points. Braves had battled Totems on even terms in the opening quarter, coming out with a 12-12 tie. Belmont took a 14-12 lead to start the second quarter before the roof fell in.

Steve Rothwell gave Hampton good support with 18 points while Malcolm Moscrop topped the scorers for Belmont with 15 points.

Braves, who won the league and Vancouver Island titles last season, lost only one league game in that stretch, a 50-46 decision to Oak Bay Bays on Jan. 12, 1972.

Bays started off their season with a 70-44 victory over visiting Claremont Spartans. Bays scored the first points of the game and never lost the lead although Spartans tied the game at 2-2 and 4-4.

Chris Trumpy and Brian Sutherland-Brown scored 13 points each for Oak Bay, one more than teammate Grant Boland. Brian Montgomery, who moved to Claremont this season from Reynolds, led Spartans with 13 points.

Highly-rated Mt. Douglas Rams whipped Reynolds Roadrunners, 75-45, at Mt. Douglas, getting 21 points from Kevin Worth and 18 from Doug Mosher. Avtar Bains was Roadrunners' lone scoring threat, getting 23 points.

At Esquimalt, Mount View Hornets had little trouble with the Dockers, romping to a 60-28 win. Dockers put up a good fight in the opening quarter but went to pieces the second quarter when Hornets outscored the hosts, 12-2.

Kevin Gilbert had 18 points for the winners, six more than teammate Dave Hagstrom. Ben Shotton, wearing a bandage to protect a knee cartilage operation and operating at about half speed, topped the Dockers with 10 points.

Hornets were called for only four personal fouls in the cleanly-played game, four less than Dockers.

Ramblers Scramble For Opening Victory

Mt. Douglas Ramblers, reigning B.C. champions, needed a scrambling effort Tuesday night to avoid a season-opening loss in the Victoria High School Girls Basketball League.

Behind by as many as 18 points in the first half, Ramblers finally caught visiting Reynolds Roadrunners in the late stages for a 42-40 triumph.

Mairi Anne Longmore and Alix Bawlf, with 11 and 10 points, respectively, were the Ramblers' leading scorers. Shirley Skaroop had 19 points for Roadrunners, who had a 14-4 lead after one quarter and were ahead, 22-13, at the half.

Belmont Tomahawks, defending league champions, downed the stubborn Tigerettes, 34-27, at Victoria High School in another of the four games on Tuesday night.

Oak Bay, with Marg Mainwaring again showing the way, breezed past visiting Claremont, 35-19. Miss Mainwaring had 14 points for Bays, who held a 23-3 margin at halftime.

Esquimalt Dockettes scored a 30-26, home-court win over Mount View, getting 13 points from Cathy Wilkinson and 12 from Debbie Knowles.

Canucks Break Slump By Shutting Out Blues

Vancouver Canucks, perhaps jolted by recent criticism, rewarded their fans at Pacific Coliseum with their first shutout at home in the National Hockey League.

Today's game between New York Islanders and Toronto will be telecast on Channel 8 starting at 5 p.m.

Roasted by the sports media in Vancouver, for inept play, the seventh-place club came up with a sterling performance to blank St. Louis Blues, 3-0 Tuesday night.

And it was goalkeeper Dunc Wilson, one of the players singled out as having a bad attitude, who showed the way.

Wilson made 33 saves, many on the spectacular side, to gain his first shutout of the season and second as a Canuck. He was also credited with Vancouver's only other NHL shutout, a scoreless draw against the Maple Leafs in Toronto last season.

In the only other game, Los Angeles Kings edged hapless New York Islanders, 3-2.

Don Tannahill, in his first season as a NHL regular scored only goal the Canucks needed to break a losing streak at four games. Tannahill flipped Andre Boudrias' rebound high over netminder Wayne Stephenson, early in the second period.

The second goal, which put the game out of reasonable doubt, came from defenceman Dennis Kearns on a screen shot from the left point at 15:22 of the final period.

Bryan McSheffrey, recalled from Seattle Totems of the Western Hockey League to fill in for captain Orland Kurtenbach, recuperating from a gall-bladder operation, closed out the scoring with 66 seconds left. McSheffrey banged in a rebound from a Dale Tallon shot.

Wilson was busiest — and best — in the opening period, making 13 saves. One was from a point-blank shot by Jack Egers and the Canuck goalkeeper followed that up with a great glove save on Chris Evans' shot which was headed for the top left-hand corner.

The spirited game produced only one fight. Canucks' Bobby Schmautz and Evans tangling at the end of the second period.

At Uniondale, N.Y., the Kings scored three goals in the opening three minutes and 44 seconds to start the Islanders to their eighth straight loss.

Mike Corrigan started the blitz at 1:29, Serge Bernier clicked 89 seconds later and Vic Venasky closed out the Los Angeles scoring, generating a round of jeers for the hometown Islanders by the 10,143 fans.

Islanders, shut out in their last two games, finally ended their scoreless drought at 176 minutes and 11 seconds when Dave Hudson scored midway through the second period.

Brian Spencer made it close when he scored with more than four minutes remaining but Gary Edwards held the first-year club out the rest of the way for the victory. It moved the Kings into third place in the West Division.

Cournoyer in Hospital

MONTREAL (CP) — Yvan Cournoyer, Montreal Canadiens right winger, entered hospital Tuesday for tests to determine the seriousness of an abdominal injury he suffered in a game Monday night against Minnesota North Stars. He will miss at least one game.

"The doctor thinks its a bruised abdominal muscle but the guy's in real pain," said Sam Pollock, general manager of the National Hockey League club. "It was so bad he was thinking of going to the hospital during the night."

Cournoyer, who scored two goals in the 3-3 tie with the North Stars, was slammed into the boards during the first period by Minnesota defenceman Ted Harris. They were his 25th and 26th goals of the season.

Pollock said Cournoyer will not be in the Montreal lineup when the Canadiens visit the North Stars in Bloomington tonight.

Shutouts a Combined Effort With Toronto Goalkeepers

Ron Low and Jacques Plante are involved in one of the most confusing statistics recorded by the National Hockey League this season.

The Toronto Maple Leaf goalkeepers are listed as having one shutout each but the Leafs have posted four shutouts this campaign.

The other two shutouts came about when the two shared goalkeeping duties on Nov. 25 against California Golden Seals and Dec. 29 against Pittsburgh Penguins.

The Pittsburgh shutout was mostly the work of Low, who played all but the final 24 seconds of the game.

League-statistician Ron Andrews said there were no shared shutouts in 1971-72 but five of the shutouts in 1970-71 were split between two goalkeepers.

The individual lead in shutouts is shared by three players. Ken Dryden of Montreal Canadiens, Cesare Maniago of Minnesota North Stars and Roy Edwards of Detroit Red Wings all have four.

In the individual scoring race, Boston's Phil Esposito maintained his lead but Stan Mikita of Chicago Black Hawks closed in on the Bruin star with a brilliant effort.

While Esposito was picking up his 35th and 36th assists to bring his point total to 60, Mikita scored the first goal and assisted on the next four in the Black Hawks' 5-4 triumph Sunday over the Bruins. The outburst gave Mikita 20 goals and 38 assists for 58 points, two behind the leader and one ahead of Jacques Lemaire of the Canadiens.

Lemaire assisted on two goals Monday by linemate Yvan Cournoyer in a 3-3 tie against Minnesota to move one point ahead of Buffalo Sabres' Rene Robert. Lemaire's 30 goals is tops in the NHL, three more than Robert, and Mikita and Gilbert Perreault of Buffalo, fifth in the scoring race, share the lead in assists with 38.

Cougars Tackle Tough Oil Kings Tonight

Victoria Cougars will ice their strongest lineup tonight when the powerful Edmonton Oil Kings visit Memorial Arena.

Cougars, struggling to snap a losing streak that has reached three games, should have two of their biggest players back in time for the Western Canada Hockey League game which starts at 8.

Winger Don Williams, who suffered an eye injury last week and missed one game, has been given clearance to play.

Defenceman Ed Boucha, out three games with an injured knee, has skated in practice but it will depend on the team doctor's report before game time whether the husky rearguard will see action.

Oil Kings are in a three-way tie for second place in the Western Division, one point behind New Westminster Bruins.

In Edmonton's only appearance in Victoria this season, Cougars scored a convincing 5-2 win.

Cougar general-manager Eric Bishop met for several hours Tuesday with Cliff McNabb, general manager for Nanaimo Clippers of the B.C. Junior Hockey League and discussed possible player changes.

Bishop gave McNabb permission to talk to two players on the Cougar roster with a view to them finishing this season in the BCJHL, where the Cougar-affiliate Clippers are leading the Coastal Division.

McNabb was unavailable for comment Tuesday night.

In league play Tuesday, Saskatoon Blades hammered Calgary Centennials, 5-2; Regina Pats buried Swift Current Broncos, 9-3, and Medicine Hat Tigers topped Winnipeg Jets, 7-4.

In Saskatoon, Dennis Abgrall snapped a scoreless slump at 19 games by firing three goals for Blades, sending Centennials reeling to their fifth straight loss.

Blades increased their lead in the Eastern Division to three points over second-place Flin Flon Bombers.

At Regina, flashy centre Dennis Sobchuk had a seven-point evening for the Pats, scoring three goals and setting up four others. Linemate Mike Wanchuk scored two goals and added three assists.

In Winnipeg, Lanny McDonald, Boyd Anderson and Bob Gassoff scored two goals each as Medicine Hat took period leads of 3-1 and 5-3 in the roughly-played affair.

High Bids Astounded Architect

RICHMOND (CP) — A public inquiry ordered by the British Columbia government was told Monday that the lowest tender for an extension to Campbell River hospital was about $584,000 more than the architects $1.6 million estimate.

Architect Herbert Wilson said the extension called for 30 acute care beds, a new laboratory, cafeteria and radiology room. He said cost estimates between himslf and L. P. Wynick, quantity surveyor hired by the hospital board, came to $1,637,775.

The lowest tender was a bid of $2,221,700 from Farmer Construction Ltd. Other tenders came from Janin Western Construction Ltd. for $2,273,954, Gana Construction Ltd. for $2,337,000 and D. Robinson Construction Ltd for $2,546,000.

Wilson said between 40 and 50 per cent of the contractors' tenders would be based on subcontractors' estimates for jobs such as plastering, metal and electrical installation work.

Wilson told the inquiry into possible tender irregularities that the high tenders came "as quite a surprise." He said subcontract tenders had been placed again with a Jan. 15 deadline.

The inquiry, held under Dr. Harry Purdy, chairman of the Greater Vancouver Regional Hospital District's advisory committee, is expected to last at least a week.

NDP Rule Slows Saanich Shopping

By JOHN FERRY

Mayor Hugh Curtis Monday night heralded a year in which the municipality would "feel the full effect" of the policies of the new provincial government.

Referring to 1972 in his inaugural speech to council as a "tumultuous year marked by change", he also urged council to await clarification of government recreational policy before rushing into any particular recreation project.

Curtis welcomed Mayor Peter Pollen's December invitation for discussions at Victoria City Hall over the formation of a joint recreational program involving two or more municipalities. However he remained "unconvinced" that a second ice rink in Saanich should be a priority on the year's shopping list.

Curtis said that Saanich seemed to attract people "who have a very real interest in matters relating to the environment and the outdoors." He hoped that in the coming year council would be able to allot further dollars to parkland acquisition, recreational facilities and open space.

But he admitted to a "degree of frustration" that the green-belt proposal prepared by Saanich planning department had been delayed by the provincial government's decision to take a "completely new look" at green-belt acquisition.

In the general field of planning the mayor looked forward to the completion of the municipality's five-year sewage project and the success of land assembly scheme designed to put serviced lots within the reach of middle income families. Curtis said he hoped that by the end of the year Saanich would have over 1,000 such lots ready for the market.

He congratulated Saanich police on keeping down the number of traffic deaths to four in 1972 as compared with seven in 1971 and 14 the previous year. But he warned of a continuing drug problem.

Said Curtis: "Let no one be misled or lulled into thinking that the problem has diminished in the past year or that quiet, semi-rural Saanich has somehow escaped this national and international trend." He said that much of the crime in the municipality arouse from addicts supporting their habit.

Flood Damage Pegged at $100,000

NORTH COWICHAN — Flooding in the Cowichan Valley over Christmas caused an estimated $100,000 damage according to a team of flood assessors operating in the valley over the past week.

A spokesman for the assessors said 99 claims were filed during the week at their headquarters at 83 Trunk Road in Duncan, but another 20 or more claims are anticipated.

"There is an average of about $1,000 damage per home," said the spokesman for Canadian Independent Adjusters Conference, a team of experts carrying out appraisal of the damage. Hardest areas hit by the flooding, which occurred mainly on Christmas Day, were Beverley and Heather Streets in North Cowichan, and Lang Street in Chemainus.

In some of the homes, water rose to a level of 26 inches, the spokesman said. Residents who were affected by the flooding had been unable to begin clean-up of the damage until the assessment took place. Others who plan to file damage claims are urged to do so quickly so the firm can move on to other areas.

The assessments do not insure compensation, said the spokesman, as his firm only carries out appraisal of the damage done.

"Our reports go to the provincial government for further consideration, any decision for compensation is made by them," he said.

Meanwhile, both the city of Duncan and the Municipality of North Cowichan are embarking on programs to protect homes in the Cowichan Valley from flooding.

At North Cowichan's inaugural meeting Monday afternoon, aldermen passed a resolution to have the finance committee and administrator make a study of the flood situation in the whole municipality. One of the suggestions put to the council was to look into the feasibility of moving the homes in the Beverley-Heather Streets area to another location. Of the 52 homes in the locality, 44 were damaged by flooding.

And Duncan Mayor Jim Quaife urged officials from the Cowichan Valley to meet with Lands Minister Robert Williams to come up with a plan for flood control.

Expenditures Decline

Budget Guideline For Nanaimo Indicates Boost

NANAIMO — City taxpayers here face an increase in their property taxes this year of more than five per cent if the city's provisional budget is adopted in its present state.

The budget calls for expenditures during the year of $7,512,165 during 1973, which is down from more than $7,705,000 last year. The budget is balanced.

There are no major items which have been substantially reduced from the 1972 totals but several items show small decreases which, when totalled, account for the difference in the two budgets.

In order to balance the budget, finance committee chairman, Mrs. G. L. Hall has increased the city's mill rate from 93.935 in 1972 to 98.665 mills in the provisional budget this year.

Mrs. Hall stressed, however, that the budget is only provisional and although it must be adopted, either in its present form or as amended by council, by Jan. 22.

It is used only as a guideline for city council, members of which will be charged with coming to grips with the problem of financing the city for the year in the spring when they will set the final mill rate on revised spending estimates.

One of the major differences in the estimates for this year over 1972 is the absence in the revenue section of $550,000 which was included last year to pay for two major off-street parking structures. However, this will be offset this year as the city pays for one of the structures which is now complete and pays for the majority of the other, which will be finished late this year.

Another major item in the budget is the expenditure in 1973 of $10,000 as the city prepares to make its 100th year of incorporation in 1974. No details are available yet on what form the celebrations will take and what the money will be designated for.

The city also expects to pay out an additional $113,000 this year to School District 68 in the form of taxes collected by the city for the school district. Other services, including the regional hospital, regional district assessment and the assessment against city residents by the greater Nanaimo sewer board, also show modest increases over 1973, despite the fact that the hospital and school district budgets have not yet been prepared.

On introduction of the budget Monday night, council immediately moved all further discussion and study of the document into committee of the whole and a decision on its adoption will be made Jan. 22.

Power Failure, Lawyer Delay Duncan Council

DUNCAN — A packed gallery witnessed the inaugural meeting of the Duncan city council and the swearing in of officials at city hall Monday night.

The meeting started late due to a power failure, which plunged the city into darkness, and by the failure of the officiating lawyer to show up. Lawyer Dave Williams, a guest at the function, swore in the new alderman, school trustees, and appointed commission members.

After the swearing-in, the council held its first meeting of the year. Mayor Jim Quaife outlined the achievements in the city over the past year, and touched upon issues the new council will deal with in 1973.

He said the council will be asked to consider the appropriation of funds for a storm drain system in the Centennial Heights area to divert water around the subdivision rather than through it. He said tenders had also been called for a drainage system in the Third Street area to alleviate the water problem there.

"City residents must not be expected to live in constant fear of flooding," he said.

Quaife also said a proper dyking system to protect those homes in the valley which are flood prone was high on the list of priorities.

"Arrangments will be made during the next two weeks for a meeting with the minister of lands and forests, Mayor Gerry Smith of North Cowichan, Chief Louise Underwood of the Cowichan Indian Band, and the regional board chairman, to come up with a plan for flood control for the Cowichan Valley," said the mayor.

Municipal Affairs Minister James Lorimer's announcement on forced amalgamation was welcomed by Quaife who said the Cowichan community was suffering because of man-made boundaries.

"We must begin to take stock of what is happening around us. We must begin to realize we are no longer an oasis in the desert, development is taking place very rapidly, and unless we are prepared to take a greater interest in outside affairs, and to look to either the extension of the city boundaries, or the eliJimination entirely of our boundaries, then this whole community is going to suffer, and will continue to suffer," said Quaife.

The undertaking of a five year capital development program for the commercial-service-industrial area east of the railway in Duncan, and the construction of an ice arena in the area, were two other proposals Quaife said the council will be asked to consider.

Quaife also announced to the council and audience the city received word Monday morning the federal government had approved two grants totalling $40,000 under L.I.P., for the completion of the McAdam and Rotary Park projects. Quaife estimated the combined projects would employ up to 45 people by the time they are completed.

Cold Weather Deterrent

Use of Salt Curtailed

NANAIMO — Record low temperatures combined with three good-sized snowfalls so far this winter have resulted in the use of more salt on district roads than ever before.

District highways superintendent John Morris said Tuesday however, that natural growth of the area has contributed to the increased salt usage.

Despite the increased amount being used, there is no shortage here, he said. Two 50-ton railway car loads were unloaded Monday and more will be ordered as needed from the Vancouver supply firm.

Morris had been questioned earlier about what appeared to be a possible shortage of salt. Only small amounts have been used on main roads since the snowfall a week ago.

The highways superintendant explained, however, that when temperatures reach about 10 above and lower, salt can "do more harm than good" on roads.

"During this very cold weather, we have been using straight sand. But as the weather warms up, as it appears it is doing, we will be using salt again and secondary and other roads in the district will be returned to good condition," he said.

Temperature records have been broken in Nanaimo and the surrounding districts for the last several days with over-night low temperature reaching the 7 to 10 degree range.

Liquor on Ferry

Passengers travelling on the overnight trip between Prince Rupert and Kelsey Bay will soon be able to buy a drink, Highways Minister Robert Strachan said Tuesday.

An announcement from the minister's office said a liquor lounge will be installed aboard the Queen of Prince Rupert when the ship goes into drydock for refit Jan. 22.

Strachan, who previously confirmed the action was being studied by his department, stressed this will be the only ship in the B.C. Ferries fleet on which liquor will be sold. He said the lounge will close at midnight.

Nanaimo Man Top Retailer

NANAIMO — A longtime Nanaimo businessman, W. H. (Bill) Anderson, has been named the recipient of the top award by the Women's Wear Association of Vancouver.

Anderson was named the outstanding retailer in the trade for 1972.

Presentation of a silver tray to mark the occasion was made at the association's annual dinner in Vancouver last week.

Victoria Normal Despite Dispute

B.C. Tel operators in Nanaimo and Campbell River took part in a slowdown of service Tuesday after contract talks in Vancouver between the company and the Federation of Telephone Workers of B.C. broke down.

Called a work-to-rule by union officials, the slowdown also affected five other centres in the province. Operators in Victoria, meanwhile, continued at their normal pace.

The slowdown was most felt on direct assistance and operators asking for a caller's number during direct long-distance dialling.

A spokesman in Victoria said operators there were "carrying their load" but could not say why they didn't take part in the slowdown. Union officials were not available for comment.

Union officials say the operators, whose contract expired Dec. 31, are only following company rules after contract talks broke off Friday and the union applied for federal conciliation.

"Members of the Vancouver local had a general membership meeting after hearing a report on negotiations Friday, and decided it was in their best interest to observe all company rules for operators," spokesman Hazel Magee said Tuesday.

"This should not be interpreted as a slowdown because these rules are made by the company and should be observed at all times."

Wage Increase Forecast

COURTENAY — The teacher salary award in the Courtenay school district will probably be close to 9 per cent. Secretary-Treasurer Roy Mills told trustees this week.

Courtenay had a two-year contract with its teachers, based on a piggy back with seven other Island school districts.

Mills said in his report, "by agreement the scales increased in Sooke and Alberni by 9 per cent and in Nanaimo by 9.4 per cent. By arbitration the scales increased by 8.95 per cent in Victoria and Cowichan and 8.53 per cent in Qualicum. Only Saanich remains to be heard from.

He said that in order for the adjusted payroll figures to be used in January a meeting with the teachers' negotiating committee would have to be held immediately, in order to determine distribution of the increase over the salary scale. A meeting was arranged for this Thursday to finalize this point.

Inquest Ordered

DUNCAN — An inquest has been ordered into the death of an Indian youth who was found dead Saturday morning on the Cowichan Indian Reserve. Archie Jimmy, 17, was found strangled in the carport of a Koksilah house.

Police said they suspect no foul play, but are still investigating the death. No date has been set for the inquest.

Critic Given Seat

Regional Board Personnel Change

Ellis
. . . past chairman

COURTENAY — There will be some new faces around the Courtenay-Comox Regional Board table when it convenes for its February meeting.

At Courtenay council, last year's regional representative was shuffled in favor of Mayor Bill Moore.

Gordon Wagner, who was also chairman of the regional recreation committee following the resignation of director Chris Taylor, was nominated as alternate to the regional but declined the nomination.

Wagner asked when the new director took office and although there was some division of opinion on this, Wagner was quick to tell Moore he would be glad to hand over the chairmanship of the regional recreation committee.

This committee has been under fire by councils in the Comox Valley and by a service club council, for what was termed as "lack of action."

In Cumberland, regional representative Andy Harvie will reappear at the board table but the alternative will be Mayor Bill Moncrief, an outspoken critic of the regional board set-up.

The Town of Comox chose former mayor and newly elected Ald. Ron Ellis as its regional representative. The alternate is Ald. Eileen Turnbull, who sat as regional director last year. Ellis is also past chairman of the regional board, a position he held since its inception until 1971 when he was defeated by Dick Merrick in the Comox mayoralty race.

A regional recreation committee meeting, scheduled for Tuesday night has been cancelled, regional secretary Eric Heibert said, because of the shuffle in committee members. He said a second look would have to be taken before bringing back the architect with costs for the proposed arena and sketch plans for an indoor swimming pool complex.

Whatever action the new committee takes, it appears fairly certain that a referendum proposed for February will likely be postponed again.

Blimp-like craft, described as world's first hot-air airship rises from field near Newbury, England, on public maiden flight Sunday. It measures 100 by 60 feet when inflated but can be folded to fit in car trailer. It sports air-inflated rudder and Volkswagen engine which powers five-foot propeller. Builders, Cameron Balloons of Bristol and Littlemore Engineering of Oxford, predict big exports of craft, said to cost little to fly.

Anderson Urges B.C. Job Action

'Get Off Butt'

Premier Barrett was advised Tuesday to "get up off his butt" and do something about B.C.'s worsening unemployment problem.

The unsolicited advice came from B.C. Liberal leader David Anderson.

Acutally, disclosure that the province's unemployment figure for 1972 had risen to 7.6 per cent from 7.1 per cent for the previous year brought a general shifting of blame.

Barrett said a great deal of the responsibility lay with the ferederal government. Both Anderson and Social Credit house leader Frank Richter put the blame squarely at Barrett's doorstep. Conservative house leader Scott Wallace said the fault lay in a number of areas.

After hearing of Barrett's stand, Anderson said: "He still thinks, now that he's premier, that he can get away with careless and inaccurate statements and buck-passing. It's about time he got up off his butt and did something."

During an interview Barrett said the unemployment figures appeared to reflect a general drift in the Canadian economy. But he was also critical of the federal government's failure to distribute federal money until a late date for winter works programs.

"Had we received those funds earlier, the figure wouldn't have been as bad as it is," he said.

While expressing disappointment over the situation, he said he was hopeful Prime Minister Trudeau would "act quickly" on proposals Barrett said he made during his meeting in Ottawa with Trudeau last month. He did not say what the proposals were.

He said he was certain the unemployment figures would be reduced if Trudeau did take the recommended action.

"We're in need of aggressive leadership from Ottawa and I hope we will get that now that the House is back together."

In a prepared statement Richter said the unemployment picture was "in line with NDP policy which he said had scared business and discouraged investment. He also said that distribution of the money to municipalities to create work had been further delayed by the provincial government's decision to set up a cabinet committee for study.

"Under the previous government, one person in the department of municipal affairs did all the work, and very quickly," Richter said.

Miniplanes Skyjacked

CANNOCK, England (Reuter) — A group of radio control model-aircraft enthusiasts has run up against the crime of the 1970s-hijacking.

Several radio-controlled planes costing up to $320 each have disappeared mysteriously during flights.

The enthusiasts believe that the hijacker has a radio device which can divert the planes.

Early Budget Aims at Jobs

CP, UPI

OTTAWA — Prime Minister Trudeau said Tuesday an early budget would be introduced with measures to alleviate unemployment in Canada which rose to 6.8 per cent in December.

Answering questions in the House of Commons, Trudeau said the government already had taken measures to pump $375 million into winter job creation this year.

He said other aid would come in "the budget speech which we expect will be fairly soon which will announce a whole series of measures in respect of the economy and to reduce unemployment."

Tuesday, the Liberal minority government won its first vote of the 29th parliament, defeating a Conservative motion to postpone the throne speech debate and get on with other business.

The vote was 154 to 104, with only Conservative party members supporting the motion moved by veteran Tory George Hees.

New Democratic and Social Credit party members supported the Liberals to defeat the motion.

Turner
. . . 'unexpected reversals'

Statistics Canada reported Tuesday the seasonally adjusted unemployment rate rose from 6.6 per cent in November to 6.8 per cent in December, leaving 548,000 Canadians unemployed in a labor force of 8.9 million.

Finance Minister John Turner, speaking in debate Tuesday afternoon, gave no new indication of the tax plans or other economic measures which would be contained in his budget.

He said it would contain "new fiscal and other measures to deal with our most pressing economic and social problem, our most pressing human problem — the creation of jobs in Canada."

The minister blamed the high December unemployment on unexpected economic reversals in the October-December quarter. "But the pause was only temporary," he said, noting the large number of strikes during the period.

Turner said he would not make any predictions now for the economic growth in 1973. But, he quoted a forecast by the Organization for Economic Co-operation and Development that Canada would have higher growth than any industrialized country except Japan. He said also the University of Toronto economic forecasting unit had predicted a growth rate of 7½ per cent in the year.

"No doubt there are problems, among which is the fact that the rate of unemployment is higher than it ought to be," Turner conceded. "The pace of growth in Canada for several years has ex-

French officials will have . . .

AP, Reuter

PARIS — President Georges Pompidou charged Tuesday that the leaders of three governments, including Golda Meir of Israel, will be intruding in French internal politics by attending an international Socialist conference this weekend in Paris. He said French officials will have nothing to do with them.

Others scheduled to attend the congress of the Socialist International include Premier Olof Palme of Sweden and Chancellor Bruno Kreisky of Austria.

The three Socialist leaders were invited by Francois Mitterrand, secretary-general of the French Socialist party.

When asked at his semi-annual news conference what his attitude toward the participants would be, Pompidou tartly replied that this was not the right time for such a meeting, as French National Assembly elections are coming up March 4 and March 11.

Dock Pact Expected By Today

VANCOUVER (CP) — A settlement in the B.C. dock dispute "should be very close," Ed Strang, president of the B.C. Maritime Employers Association, said Tuesday.

Strang said all three outstanding problems had been discussed in a meeting Tuesday between the employers' group and the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union, and added: "I thought we might have had a settlement today."

But he said the union advised him they wanted to meet to discuss the matter and he is to contact union officials today.

The three contentious items which were holding up a settlement are updating the guaranteed job opportunity clause, retroactive pay and amending the wording of the master contract.

The union wants the 1969 guaranteed work clause updated to include members who have joined the union since that date. The dockers also want retroactive pay paid to non-union casual workers.

B.C.'s 3,200 longshoremen went on strike in August, but were ordered back to work by federal legislation which expired Dec. 31.

Blackout Rule May Spur Victoria CBC Station

By BRUCE LOWTHER
Colonist TV Writer

The CBC may set up its own television station in Victoria partly because of a federal rule designed to protect local stations like CHEK, the Colonist learned Tuesday.

There was no official comment from the CBC on strong rumors of a second Victoria TV station but the network did comment on a second set of rumors — about its own AM radio station in Victoria — by saying that won't come at least until 1975 or later.

Sources in the broadcasting industry in several Canadian cities said the CBC has not yet applied to the Canadian Radio-TV Commission in Ottawa for permission to operate a TV channel out of Victoria but the paper work has been started.

The sources said the basic push for a CBC television station in Victoria comes from the fact that this is the only provincial capital in Canada without one — and that goes for radio, too.

But there may have been an extra push due to the CRTC's rule of mid-1972 allowing cable-television systems to black out programs on other channels when the same program is shown on a local channel — provided the local channel asks for the blackout.

B.C. Television, which owns both Victoria's CHEK and Vancouver's CHAN, has frequently asked Victoria Cablevision Ltd. to black out the Seattle ABC station (KMO, Channel 4) when it is showing the episode of Marcus Welby on CHAN (Channel 8) at the same time.

The Victoria cable firm also acceeded to a request for a blackout of Channel 4 when both it and CHEK (Channel 6) were showing Love, American Style. This has not been done in recent weeks.

All that is acceptable to the CBC but the rub may have come with something the Colonist reported last fall — B.C. Television wanted the CBC's Vancouver station, CBUT (Channel 2), blacked out on Victoria Cablevision when it and Channel 6 were showing the same program, which often occurs.

Such a blackout never took place but the request may have been the spur that started the CBC to working seriously on a Victoria station of its own.

Judo Falls Land Him In Medical History

By CLAUDE ADAMS
Colonist Reporter

Nanaimo carpenter Tom Ikeda, a one-time green belt in judo, has won a small place in the medical history books, thanks to his stubbornness.

Ikeda, 33, of 181 Nottingham in Nanaimo, might be the only man in North America forced to give up the sport because of an extremely uncommon shoulder injury, called traumatic osteolysis of the clavicle.

And, as reported by Dr. M. J. Smart of Nanaimo Regional General Hospital in a medical journal the case seems to have caught the attention of radiologists all over the continent. It has a prominent place in the New York-based Radiology News Digest.

It all started in October, 1967, when Ikeda had a bad "break fall" while practising at the Nanaimo Judo Club.

"You're not supposed to land on your shoulder, but I did," he said. He went to see his doctor.

X-rays showed nothing unusual and he was given a drug to relieve the pain. But four months later, he hurt his right shoulder again after a fall. Still the x-rays showed nothing wrong, but the young man was warned to give up judo.

He persisted, however, and in April, 1968, he came in complaining of pain in the left shoulder. X-rays were negative again. Determined to continue in the sport, Ikeda went back to the bruising practices and, sure enough, pains started in both shoulders.

"The doctor warned me quite a few times to stop, but I didn't. I just kept going back for more cortisone (an antibiotic) shots," he said.

Ikeda took his last bad fall in February, 1970. The x-rays showed that parts of his collarbone were being destroyed. This time the doctor wouldn't take no for an answer.

"It was by this time apparent," writes Smart, "even to the patient, that the continued falls were producing severe changes in his shoulders and he was finally persuaded to give up judo."

Ikeda, who had been working at the sport since the age of 15, says his trainers and instructors never suspected that he had suffered a bad injury.

"As you're learning, you do suffer quite a bit, but you can't go crying to the instructor every time you get a bruise."

All available data shows that Ikeda's is the first case on record where such an injury was directly attributable to judo.

The collarbone is healing now, and Ikeda jokingly says that he may take up karate.

B.C. Profiling Aimed At Prevention

Help Planned for Child-Beaters

By IAN STREET
Colonist Legislature Reporter

The provincial government is preparing a profile of a typical child-beater in an effort to assist professional groups in early diagnosis.

The move is part of a B.C. program, outlined at a conference Tuesday by Health Minister Dennis Cocke and Rehabilitation Minister Norman Levi, keyed to prevention.

The ministers said there were 180 reported cases of battered children in the province during 1971, the last year for which figures are available. In that period there were 12 deaths.

In 1965 there were 70 cases reported.

Cocke said the government is taking a very serious view of the problem. "There are not that many children being abused," the minister told reporters, "but those who are, must be protected. The parents (of these children) are also in a difficult situation.

"Many of the parents are lonely, isolated, typically the subject of abuse in their own childhood and lacking in self-esteem. But a significant finding of recent studies throughout North America is that 90 per cent can be helped. That's why we feel it is so incumbent on professional groups to come forward so we can help these parents."

The health minister said the four main professional groups to be reached are, doctors, nurses, social workers and
